In America, calls to talk shows are usually "screened" by college students majoring in speech communications who are doing internships at the stations. If you sound coherent, you get asked your first name and city of residence and then get patched through. Sometimes the students guess wrong, and the caller goes crazy on the host, in which case the host switches to a commercial and lets the caller rant until they can get them to hang up. Some hosts hang up on callers as part of their routine, but most are too polite to do that. Hosts are also taught in broadcasting school to make up a false name to use on air so they don't get tracked down and stalked by fans or people they offend, that's how bad the stalking problem is in the US.

And I haven't told you about "social promotion" in education, where students are passed from one grade to the next even if they fail the grade or can't do grade level work just to keep them from backing up the system. When California decided to end social promotion, the mass flunkings that resulted threatened to paralyze the schools, so the politicians had to back off.

That's right.  Bush is hated worldwide, and he wants to force real Americans to suffer the same fate, even though they do not support his war crimes.  Bush will follow his hero Hitler, and end up the same way or worse.

Maybe long life lithium batteries sealed inside the radio? I've seen flashlights built on that principle, and they work and are cheap but have a limited shelf life. Sounds like the requirements of a radio you're going to smuggle into a country where there are no batteries.

You really want to know? Track down a copy of the book "Rich Dad's Prophecy" by Robert Kiyosaki. Don't bother reading Part 2 where he tells you how to get rich. Just read Part 1, where he talks mostly about the upcoming collapse of the welfare state in America but has a good section on security vs freedom and what happened to the America that valued freedom.

If FDR hadn't been elected, we would have had a full blown revolution instead of just a coup, and America would be in even worse shape. The Depression put this country in a bad situation: either use the government to feed the starving millions or risk a bloody revolution and civil war.

How old are you? I can't believe anyone over 25 hasn't heard the term before. As others have posted, a "quarter" is 15 minutes, AKA 1/4 of an hour...

well, all those foreigners are complaining that us Americans arew only listening to news from American sources and aren't listening to their news sources. (despite the fact that many Americans have and listen to shortwave radios.

If they phase out their English language services, then we Americans will indeed be limited to hearing news only from American sources. Not everyone has a computer. And most people still don't. And a lot can't afford a computer, either.

I first listened to shortwave either in te late 60's or early 70's.

>I once read that Americans are the least knowledgable about the rest

I think that idea isn't true and that foreigners just think that.

However, it probably will be true for a lot of Americans if the foreigners keep getting rid of their shortwave broadcasts and their English language shortwave broadcasts.

Not everyone has a computer.

And I don't see a lot of people with satellite dishes, either.

And DirectTV had very little foreign originated stuff.

Actually you are taking that out of context. Synchronous detection is useful only for AM, and a Regen cannot deal with selective fading any better than a standard envelope detector can.

The fact is however, that synch detection is unavailable on a regen, because you need to phase lock to the original carrier. In theory a Regen can handle SSB, in practice it cannot due to lack of a stable carrier, lack of a product detector, and inadquate sensitivity. YOu can get SSB without a product detector, as long as the injected carrier is very large relative to the SSB signal so the envelope detector is operating in a linear part of the V/I cure. NB fm can be slope detected, standard FM cannot, it is much too wide for slope detection work. NB FM is mathematically the same as AM with a low modulation index.

Synch detection isn't much good for FM.

not only the callers. Years ago, I once heard a talk radio show ( either on regular AM or FM. I think AM) that had a guest on that claimed that travelling through time into the past and future was already done by the government.

I think he also claimed that he travelled through time himself, also.

Although I dopn't quite remember if he claimed he did also or not.

around here, the radio stations even introduce people (the callers) by only nicknames (similar to Usenet), but they did that here even back in the 70's and 80's before most people had Usenet, and recently, also.

Some names when te DJ's introduced the callers:

"The Call Girl".

"Howard Belcher"

"The Swami"

There's more, but I can't remember them right now. Time for me to get out my old audiotapes.

speaking of getting out my old audiotapes, I also have some old audiotapes of some shortwave radio broadcasts that I recorded from my radio.

These would probably be from sometime in the 80's.

Possibly late 70's, but I think it's probably more like mid-80's.

I Smell a Rat

BY COLIN SHEA

POLITICS | 11.11.2004

I smell a rat. It has that distinctive and all-too-familiar odor of the species Republicanus floridius. We got a nasty bite from this pest four years ago and never quite recovered. Symptoms of a long-term infection are becoming distressingly apparent.

The first sign of the rat was on election night. The jubilation of early exit polling had given way to rising anxiety as states fell one by one to the Red Tide. It was getting late in the smoky cellar of a Prague sports bar where a crowd of expats had gathered. We had been hoping to go home to bed early, confident of victory. Those hopes had evaporated in a flurry of early precinct reports from Florida and Ohio.

By 3 AM, conversation had died and we were grimly sipping beers and watching as those two key states seemed to be slipping further and further to crimson. Suddenly, a friend who had left two hours earlier rushed in and handed us a printout.

"Zogby's calling it for Kerry." He smacked the sheet decisively. "Definitely. He's got both Florida and Ohio in the Kerry column. Kerry only needs one." Satisfied, we went to bed, confident we would wake with the world a better place. Victory was at hand.

The morning told a different story, of course. No Florida victory for Kerry--Bush had a decisive margin of nearly 400,000 votes. Ohio was not even close enough for Kerry to demand that all the votes be counted. The pollsters had been dead wrong, Bush had four more years and a powerful mandate. Onward Christian soldiers--next stop, Tehran.

Lies, damn lies, and statistics

I work with statistics and polling data every day. Something rubbed me the wrong way. I checked the exit polls for Florida--all wrong. CNN's results indicated a Kerry win: turnout matched voter registration, and independents had broken 59% to 41% for Kerry.

Polling is an imprecise science. Yet its very imprecision is itself quantifiable and follows regular patterns. Differences between actual results and those expected from polling data must be explainable by identifiable factors if the polling sample is robust enough. With almost 3.000 respondents in Florida alone, the CNN poll sample was pretty robust.

The first signs of the rat were identified by Kathy Dopp, who conducted a simple analysis of voter registrations by party in Florida and compared them to presidential vote results. Basically she multiplied the total votes cast in a county by the percentage of voters registered Republican: this gave an expected Republican vote. She then compared this to the actual result.

Her analysis is startling. Certain counties voted for Bush far in excess of what one would expect based on the share of Republican registrations in that county. They key phrase is "certain counties"--there is extraordinary variance between individual counties. Most counties fall more or less in line with what one would expect based on the share of Republican registrations, but some differ wildly.

How to explain this incredible variance? Dopp found one over-riding factor: whether the county used electronic touch-screen voting, or paper ballots which were optically scanned into a computer. All of those with touch-screen voting had results relatively in line with her expected results, while all of those with extreme variance were in counties with optical scanning.

�The intimation, clearly, is fraud. Ballots are scanned; results are fed into precinct computers; these are sent to a county-wide database, whose results are fed into the statewide electoral totals. At any point after physical ballots become databases, the system is vulnerable to external hackers.

It seemed too easy, and Dopp's method seemed simplistic. I re-ran the results using CNN's exit polling data. In each county, I took the number of registrations and assigned correctional factors based on the CNN poll to predict turnout among Republicans, Democrats, and independents. I then used the vote shares from the polls to predict a likely number of Republican votes per county. I compared this �expected' Republican vote to the actual Republican vote.

The results are shocking. Overall, Bush received 2% fewer votes in counties with electronic touch-screen voting than expected. In counties with optical scanning, he received 16% more. This 16% would not be strange if it were spread across counties more or less evenly. It is not. In 11 different counties, the �actual' Bush vote was at least twice higher than the expected vote. 13 counties had Bush vote tallies 50--100% higher than expected. In one county where 88% of voters are registered Democrats, Bush got nearly two thirds of the vote--three times more than predicted by my model.

Again, polling can be wrong. It is difficult to believe it can be that wrong. Fortunately, however, we can test how wrong it would have to be to give the �actual' result.

I tested two alternative scenarios to see how wrong CNN would have to have been to explain the election result. In the first, I assumed they had been wildly off the mark in the turnout figures--i.e. far more Republicans and independents had come out than Democrats. In the second I assumed the voting shares were completely wrong, and that the Republicans had been able to massively poach voters from the Democrat base.

In the first scenario, I assumed 90% of Republicans and independents voted, and the remaining ballots were cast by Democrats. This explains the result in counties with optical scanning to within 5%. However, in this scenario Democratic turnout would have been only 51% in the optical scanning counties--barely exceeding half of Republican turnout. It also does not solve the enormous problems in individual counties. 7 counties in this scenario still have actual vote tallies for Bush that are at least 100% higher than predicted by the model--an extremely unlikely result.

In the second scenario I assumed that Bush had actually got 100% of the vote from Republicans and 50% from independents (versus CNN polling results which were 93% and 41% respectively). If this gave enough votes for Bush to explain the county's results, I left the amount of Democratic registered voters ballots cast for Bush as they were predicted by CNN (14% voted for Bush). If this did not explain the result, I calculated how many Democrats would have to vote for Bush.

In 41 of 52 counties, this did not explain the result and Bush must have gotten more than CNN's predicted 14% of Democratic ballots--not an unreasonable assumption by itself. However, in 21 counties more than 50% of Democratic votes would have to have defected to Bush to account for the county result--in four counties, at least 70% would have been required. These results are absurdly unlikely.

The second rat

A previously undiscovered species of rat, Republicanus cuyahogus, has been found in Ohio. Before the election, I wrote snide letters to a state legislator for Cuyahoga county who, according to media reports, was preparing an army of enforcers to keep �suspect' (read: minority) voters away from the polls. One of his assistants wrote me back very pleasant mails to the effect that they had no intention of trying to suppress voter turnout, and in fact only wanted to encourage people to vote.

They did their job too well. According to the official statistics for Cuyahoga county, a number of precincts had voter turnout well above the national average: in fact, turnout was well over 100% of registered voters, and in several cases well above the total number of people who have lived in the precinct in the last century or so.

In 30 precincts, more ballots were cast than voters were registered in the county. According to county regulations, voters must cast their ballot in the precinct in which they are registered. Yet in these thirty precincts, nearly 100.000 more people voted than are registered to vote -- this out of a total of 251.946 registrations. These are not marginal differences--this is a 39% over-vote. In some precincts the over-vote was well over 100%. One precinct with 558 registered voters cast nearly 9,000 ballots. As one astute observer noted, it's the ballot-box equivalent of Jesus' miracle of the fishes. Bush being such a man of God, perhaps we should not be surprised.

What to do?

This is not an idle statistical exercise. Either the raw data from two critical battleground states is completely erroneous, or something has gone horribly awry in our electoral system--again. Like many Americans, I was dissatisfied with and suspicious of the way the Florida recount was resolved in 2000. But at the same time, I was convinced of one thing: we must let the system work, and accept its result, no matter how unjust it might appear.

With this acceptance, we placed our implicit faith in the Bush Administration that it would not abuse its position: that it would recognize its fragile mandate for what it was, respect the will of the majority of people who voted against them, and move to build consensus wherever possible and effect change cautiously when needed. Above all, we believed that both Democrats and Republicans would recognize the over-riding importance of revitalizing the integrity of the electoral system and healing the bruised faith of both constituencies.

This faith has been shattered. Bush has not led the nation to unity, but ruled through fear and division. Dishonesty and deceit in areas critical to the public interest have been the hallmark of his Administration. I state this not to throw gratuitous insults, but to place the Florida and Ohio electoral results in their proper context. For the GOP to claim now that we must take anything on faith, let alone astonishingly suspicious results in a hard-fought and extraordinarily bitter election, is pure fantasy. It does not even merit discussion.

The facts as I see them now defy all logical explanations save one--massive and systematic vote fraud. We cannot accept the result of the 2004 presidential election as legitimate until these discrepancies are rigorously and completely explained. From the Valerie Plame case to the horrors of Abu Ghraib, George Bush has been reluctant to seek answers and assign accountability when it does not suit his purposes. But this is one time when no American should accept not getting a straight answer. Until then, George Bush is still, and will remain, the �Accidental President' of 2000. One of his many enduring and shameful legacies will be that of seizing power through two illegitimate elections conducted on his brother's watch, and engineering a fundamental corruption at the very heart of the greatest democracy the world has known. We must not permit this to happen again.

You get "net congestion" even with broadband? I was listening on dialup and the "net congestion" would cause the broadcast to cut out abruptly and unpredictably. SW may fade, but it doesn't stop in midsentence as web radio does. And then there's the signal degradation, which eventually results in so many missed packets that the broadcast becomes nearly impossible to listen to. Add in the fact that most of the world's population doesn't even have a computer much less net access and web radio has a long way to go before it can be viable. Apparently the morons at DW and BBC haven't figured that out yet.

not quite. Later this month, TBS is showing the new weekly reality tv series "The Real Gilligan's Island"

I never thought I'd use the term "reality" in conjunction with "Gilligan's Island".

>how about the shortwave radio on one of the Andy Griffith shows.

I recently watched some episodes on my dvd set of "The Munsters".

There's one where Herman gets a ham radio and license.

The thing is their was kids walkie talkies transmitting on the same frequency as the ham radio in this episode.

Was this a goof in the erpisode, or did some kids walkie talkies actually use certain ham radio frequencies back in the 60's (although at much lower power, of course).

The oldest kids walkie talkies that I remember used 49 MHz.

However, I didn't have one of those until the 70's as far as I remember.

"Reality" and "Gilligan's Island" in the same sentence.

The ham radio on "The Munsters" was definitely shortwave as Herman was talking to people in other countries on it, including someone from Australia, halfway around the world.

Sadly, you may be very wrong.

=========================================

When more than 300 young Americans in the survey were shown a blank world map and asked to indicate the location of the United States, only 89 percent could do so.
Other findings from the survey:

* 34 percent of the young Americans knew that the island used on last season's "Survivor" show was located in the South Pacific, but only 30 percent could locate the state of New Jersey on a map. The "Survivor" show's location was the Marquesas Islands in the eastern South Pacific.
* When asked to find 10 specific states on a map of the United States, only California and Texas could be located by a large majority of those surveyed. Both states were correctly located by 89 percent of the participants. Only 51 percent could find New York, the third most populous state.
* On a world map, Americans could find on average only seven of 16 countries in the quiz. Swedes could find an average of 13 of the 16 countries.
* Only 71 percent of the surveyed Americans could locate the Pacific Ocean, the world's largest body of water. Worldwide, three in 10 of those surveyed could not correctly locate the Pacific Ocean.
* Although 81 percent of the surveyed Americans knew that the Middle East is the Earth's largest oil exporter, only 24 percent could find Saudi Arabia on the map.

November 1986. I was just turning 12 (November 27) and Boy's Life-a magazine for Boy Scouts-had an article on SW broadcasting and how you could hear stations from around the world. The idea gripped me, and soon I was bugging my parents for a SW radio. Problem is, they were broke, and the cheapest radio we could find was $150-and of course it was analog and so on. Finally my mom got in contact with a ham who went to our church who dug out a Hallicrafters S-40 from his shack and gave it to me. I'd never seen anything like it-what's a vacuum tube?-and was utterly fascinated. I would rush home from school every day to listen to the 31m band. I knew nothing about SW except what the old ham had showed me, and when I tuned to either side of 31m I heard nothing, so for a while I just stuck to 9500-10000 khz. But I heard most of the day's major broadcasters, including the BBC and Radio Moscow.

Heck, even the Americans admit that they're ignorant about world affairs! Part of the post 9-11 shock and the whole "we're so kind and helpful, why do they want to kill us?" reaction was due to American ignorance about what the US govt has done in their name to people around the world.

I simply can't understand why the suits at DW and BBC are so intent on cutting their First World directed transmissions. I think they're under some grand illusions about how people live in reality. VOA I can understand-it's run by people from FM radioland, and they're focused on music services like Sawa.

Yes that is true that the fundamental by itself will not produce harmonics of lower frequency but the fundamental is being modulated by data so mixed products of variable data transmitted mixing with the carrier will produce frequency energy above and below the fundamental. If you have long strings of ones or zeros the mixed frequencies will be as low as the inverse of the period of low frequency data rates.

I have a 20 foot straight wire in my garage, that works better for MW DXing than the ferrite rods in any radio I have, due to the fact that it is much further from any noise sources in the house.  I imagine the 16 foot wire being sold there would pick up some MW, but I doubt that adding the ferrite bar at the end helps one bit.

Hi.
My JRC 525 SW radio is developing a power supply fault ?
Where in the UK is the best place to send it to be repaired ?
Any advise / experiences welcomed.
Best regards
Jeff

You would be too, if YOU were on the verge of a great discovery...or, in this case, UNCOVERY. Nothing to do with sex.

It has to be that, as any sexual drive has been non existent since my private parts were obliterated in a horrendous Hydrogen Peroxide explosion at the Peenemunde rocket research centre. I sacrificed myself and any future progeny in order to shield Von Braun. The rest is history.

All that notwithstanding, I agree with Bradley B's observation of 'JuLiE-of-the-mystery-chromosome'. Whatever Steve Lare does during his quiet moments is entirely up to him.

Well with your help I'm back in action.  My 5000 has the dreaded keypad bounce so using the computer is great.  My new computer doesn't have a serial port, I had to buy a usb serial adapter.  Along with your settings I had to uninstall the serial drivers and reinstall them again and all is fine.

I haven't used the radio in quite a while so I was a little rusty.

Thanks again

Remember... it was a TV show... it doesn't have to have a basis in reality.

Repeat that 20 times and you'll be OK.

Comedy television aside, there is an off possibility that Herman's ham equipment could have communicated with kid's walkie talkies. If he had old ham gear, it may have had the 11m ham band (part of which became the 11m Citizens Band) Kid's walkie talkies of that era operated mostly on 27.125 MHz (CB channel 14). There were some fancier ones (and much higher cost) that had up to three channels. These almost always ended up being channels 9, 11, & 14. Some Japanese talkies came stock with channel 9 crystals.. and kids used to catch some hell in the early 70's because channel 9 is an emergency traffic channel.

Remember... it was a TV show... it doesn't have to have a basis in reality.

Repeat that 20 times and you'll be OK.

GG,

Why Thank You :o) Coming from You - "Rat-Fink" is a Badge of Honor !

Please feel free to make a copy of every post that I have made to these NewsGroups and forward it to your local authorities or the FBI.
I can usually expect to get a Letter or a Call 'inviting' Me to come down to their Office for a 'chat'.  But you should realize that they will also usually do a preliminary background check on you as part of the 'investigation' process (its what they do).

NOTE:  My posting to "Isle Of The Dead" was to dissuade him from making 'threats' of action here on the NewsGroups; and 'if' he felt the need for some action to simply "Do The Right Thing" and Act.

As to ME 'being' a Card-Carrying Member of the "Rat-Fink" Society:
Of that I Am guilty, Guilty. GUILTY !

For 32 Years Your Federal Tax Dollars Paid For Me To Be A "RAT-FINK"

Each and Every US President that was Elected by the American Citizens
{The Voters} was "MY" President.  I may not have liked them personally and may have disagreed with some of their political views or polities.

But to a Man, They Were MY President [.]

Former president Bill Clinton 'fired' Me (I was terminated and choose retirement during his administration.) which transformer me into "RHF" {aka: Retired, Healthy and Free !}
- God I 'love' that Man.
- Thank You Bill Clinton for Setting Me FREE !
- Otherwise I would still be "On-the-Job" today.

'Had' John F. Kerry been Elected, he would have been "MY" President.

Can you or any of your "Fellow Travelers" say the same ?

Now that I am "Retired Healthy and Free" (RHF):
- I still LOVE My Country.
- I still HELP a Friend or Neighbor in Need.
- I still CALL 911 when I See Trouble.
- I am still an Old Boy Scout :o)

This Comes to You from the Keyboard of a 'certified' "Rat-Fink".

God Bless America ~ RHF

Gee, that's something to think about, isn't it? I mean ABC, CBS, NBC and FOX aren't in a big panic about BPL, are they? Why the hell should SWLs worry more than the networks?

BPL looks like another Y2K crisis, to me.

Is that a rhetorical bet or an actual bet? You could drop your entire net worth into the stock of BPL power companies and suppliers. One of the suppliers has dropped from a high flyer to a penny stock. Your confidence in BPL is certainly much higher than the professional investors. Just think, if you're right, you could prove the "experts" wrong AND make yourself rich!! Sweet!!!

US domestic SW radio is an important part of the alternate media.  Listeners can easily get much information which is hard to find elsewhere.

US,

YES - "Real Americans want their votes to be counted."

Real Americans being the actual Citizens of the USofA
who in-fact did 'cast' their Votes on Election Day.

If in-fact you are advocating "Verified Voting" then Bring-On the United Nations (UN) and an 'Official' UN {International} Observed Election" right here in the USofA that should be
. . . VERY INTERESTING :o)

The "Standard" for a UN {International} 'Observed' Elections is:

1.  A Valid Voter ID / Photo Registration Card
presented at the Polls when you Vote.

2.  The Thumb Printing of Each Voter for Validation
and to prevent any so called 're-voting'.

Bring-On the UN {International} 'Observers' !

FREE and Un-Afraid to 'show' that "I Am an American Citizen" and I VOTE [.]

US,

YES - "Real Americans want their votes to be counted."

Real Americans being the actual Citizens of the USofA
who in-fact did 'cast' their Votes on Election Day.

If in-fact you are advocating "Verified Voting" then Bring-On the United Nations (UN) and an 'Official' UN {International} Observed Election" right here in the USofA that should be

The "Standard" for a UN {International} 'Observed' Elections is:

1.  A Valid Voter ID / Photo Registration Card
presented at the Polls when you Vote.

2.  The Thumb Printing of Each Voter for Validation
and to prevent any so called 're-voting'.

Bring-On the UN {International} 'Observers' !

The easy answer is they stopped broadcasting in English to save money.

International broadcasting is a form of public diplomacy.  Whether international broadcasting from one first world country to another actually works as public diplomacy is an important question.  I don't think it makes much difference.  Certainly few Americans listen to SW radio.  I can't think of any US election in which international broadcasting played any role.  I don't remember any significant public pressure put on Congress by SWLs.

I can't blame the Germans, or anyone else,  if they want to spend their limited resources somewhere else.

There is still DW English programming in the US.  The local college public TV station runs some DW programming, and it may be also available on college/public radio stations.

TV stations aren't concerned (yet) about BPL because the signal levels needed to receive snow free television are on the order of 50 times higher than those to receive a listenable signal on a good HF receiver (20uV for HF, and 1000uV for television). In addition, most homes are now wired for cable, which is much better shielded than your basic HF antenna.

Take note, Steve, of the first three words in my above paragraph. I made the comment that in spite of the fact that it was purely an entertainment show, and not based on fact, that a ham rig made previous to the time the Munsters was running could indeed have communicated with a kid's walkie talkie. I used to have such a rig.

If you're saying most TVs are getting much higher signal levels than most radios, I'll agree. But BPL radiation will go up with frequency and will be much higher at 60 Mhz than it will be at 5 Mhz.

That may or may not be true in the proposed BPL areas. BPL is supposed to be most attactive for outlying areas without DSL and cable acess.

Interference aside, BPL would be a slick solution if it's reliable. However, there hasn't been much evidence that BPL can deliver wide bandwidth to a significant number of customers over a long period of time.

Well of course. Why would one want a HF antenna to be shielded?

I live just south of Lexington and at our location it was much brighter then last year. I tried to capture some pix with a digital camera and it was a bust. So I dug out the old 35mm and tried some time lapse.We had some good Last Sudnay and Tuesday(I think).  I will drop the film off today on the way home and hope to have some good pix. If they are any good I will find a place to post them. A friend who lives just north of Sadieville (northen Scott county) had never seen the aurora before and thought the sun had "gone nova or somthing". My wife and I took our DX398s (we each have one) and there was no major effect on anything from 550KHz(WKRC Cinci, OH), through 15MHz WWV. There did appear to be a lot of noise in the 10mtr (28MHZ) ham band, but I didn't feel like digging out my HTX100 and listening for skip.

The lights were to rare to miss. I would love to go to Alaska just to see them "up close and personal".

Interesting. I agree with much of this, but I think there will be more major broadcasters. I wasn't at all surprised when the Swiss pulled out because of the nature of their programming. My sense was that their programs were designed to prop up their tourism industry and, if so, that's something they can do more efficiently via the internet. However, if a country, group or institution has a real message to get out, I don't think the internet, all by itself, is enough. In other words, I don't think they'll be content to put up a website and wait for people to stumble across it. They'll want to take a more proactive approach to securing an international audience. Satellite radio is a possibility, but so is shortwave, depending on the nature of the audience they hope to reach.

But maybe I'm missing something. I'm not used to being the 'optimist' in connection with any issue, but I appear to be just that where the future of shortwave is concerned.

I've used an LA350 very successfully with an SW77, so I suspect it would work just fine with the 2010. You'll need to go to Radio Shack, though, to find an appropriate plug. If they don't have it in stock, you can order it from them.

The only consumer HF radio I currently use is the aor 7030+ I run as my "portable".  The others are rack mounts.

On the 7030+, my favorite sideband filter is a crystal one marked 3.24khz.  The radio reads it as 2.9khz. (the 7030 calibrates itself for filters by sweeping them.)  The shape factor of that filter is 1.33
It was made for a Racal 6790/gm or a 6830.

The Icom FL80 filter has a pretty good shape factor - 1.5 - but I'd expect the audio to be somewhat muffled for my taste.

The specs I've seen for wider Icom brand filters for sideband imply the skirts aren't particularly steep.  You might be able to compensate for this with the twin pbt.

I don't know how much room you've got in the case, but you don't have to buy your filters from Icom.

Besides milspec filters, you might check into what Kiwa is offering.

FO&A,

Let us remember that Two Quarters make a Half.

As in "Half Past the Hour" (30 Minutes after the Hour)

The 'concept' of Quarters was most likely a Visual Imaging
{A Memory Tool} for many who were used to the old fashion "Round" ANALOG Clocks and Watches.

Close Your Eyes and 'think' of the Round Clock face as a Pie Chart.

This Imaging of a Round Clock is were we also get the terms:
-  Top-of-the-Hour {Exactly "On-the-Hour" - The Hour and Zero Minutes}
-  Bottom-of-the-Hour  {Exactly 30 Minutes Between Hours}

ABOUT:  money, Money. MONEY !
The Quarter US Dollar 25 Cents is easy to understand.  But the expression "Two-Bits" is strange to many since 'One-Bit' would be 12.5 Cents HUH?  Unless one is told that a "Bit" referred to a Piece-of-Eight (A 1/8th part 'piece' of a Spanish Coin being a Piece-of-Eight) and at one time in our history the US Quater Dollar was literaly compared to Two Pieces-of-Eight
- Hence the expression "Two-Bits" !

Pardon the thread drift, but making the receive antenna directional can improve system SNR by reducing the total noise voltage delivered to the receiver input, as a ratio of the desired signal.

The spectrum occupied by a data pulse is dependent on the rise and fall times of the pulse, not on the pulse duration.  If the rise and fall times are constant, spectral bandwidth also will be constant.  Only the distribution of energy within that spectrum will vary for pulses of different lengths (half-amplitude durations).

A familiar example of this is the "click" created in radios when a nearby electric light is switched on or off.  When the switch contacts make and break, they create a current transition across a short time interval -- which generates a wideband RF spectrum.  This RF energy is radiated by the AC wiring, and some of it is received and detected by the radio.

The problem with this research is they ignored historical voting patterns for those counties in Florida.

While those counties have a lot of registered Democrats, they traditionally vote Republican on the national level.

As for Ohio, it's been reported they goofed with absentee ballots by lumping the results from several precincts together.

Nope.  It was quite well documented that it took them several weeks to dig down to the vaults after 9/11; and once they got there they spent a whole night taking the gold and silver out under heavy police guard and moved the trucks out before daybreak.

A bit of research would have told you that.

This is unfortunately just another of the urban legends that have grown up around 9/11 and which no one with the sense God gave a goose would believe for a second.

And God knows, God didn't give a goose much sense...

BL,

"Lies, damn lies, and statistics"

After-the-Election, what you will see within 30 Days is the "Certified Voter Count" from each County in every State in the USofA and the Certification by that State's Secretary of State or other designee.

Most Electronic Voter "Systems" use 'individual' Stand-Alone Process-and-Tally Devises (Voting Machines).

Besides the 'rapid' Electronic Voter Count most 'systems' allow for a Paper Print-Out or Manual Recording of the Voter Tallies of 'each' and 'every' Voter Machine.

These Print-Outs or Tallies is forwarded to the County Register of Voters and ALL of the Print-Outs or Tallies are then Manually Added-Up as part of the Verification, Audit and Certification Process within the County.

Many of these "Questionable Votes" and "Voter Numbers" are 'originating' in Counties that are predominately Democrat and have Elected Registers of Voters who are Democrats.

ARE WE TO BELIEVE THAT ELECTED DEMOCRATS ARE RIGGING THE PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION FOR PRESIDENT GEORGE "W" BUSH ? ? ?

hello, can i get a reality check ~ RHF

In the first, I assumed they had been wildly off the mark in the turnout figures--i.e. far more Republicans and independents had come out than Democrats. In the second I assumed the voting shares were completely wrong, and that the Republicans had been able to massively poach voters from the Democrat base.
> In the first scenario, I assumed 90% of Republicans and independents voted, and the remaining ballots were cast by Democrats. This explains the result in counties with optical scanning to within 5%. However, in this scenario Democratic turnout would have been only 51% in the optical scanning counties--barely exceeding half of Republican turnout. It also does not solve the enormous problems in individual counties. 7 counties in this scenario still have actual vote tallies for Bush that are at least 100% higher than predicted by the model--an extremely unlikely result.
> In the second scenario I assumed that Bush had actually got 100% of the vote from Republicans and 50% from independents (versus CNN polling results which were 93% and 41% respectively). If this gave enough votes for Bush to explain the county's results, I left the amount of Democratic registered voters ballots cast for Bush as they were predicted by CNN (14% voted for Bush). If this did not explain the result, I calculated how many Democrats would have to vote for Bush.
> In 41 of 52 counties, this did not explain the result and Bush must have gotten more than CNN's predicted 14% of Democratic ballots--not an unreasonable assumption by itself. However, in 21 counties more than 50% of Democratic votes would have to have defected to Bush to account for the county result--in four counties, at least 70% would have been required. These results are absurdly unlikely.

> A previously undiscovered species of rat, Republicanus cuyahogus, has been found in Ohio. Before the election, I wrote snide letters to a state legislator for Cuyahoga county who, according to media reports, was preparing an army of enforcers to keep ?suspect' (read: minority) voters away from the polls. One of his assistants wrote me back very pleasant mails to the effect that they had no intention of trying to suppress voter turnout, and in fact only wanted to encourage people to vote.
> They did their job too well. According to the official statistics for Cuyahoga county, a number of precincts had voter turnout well above the national average: in fact, turnout was well over 100% of registered voters, and in several cases well above the total number of people who have lived in the precinct in the last century or so.

BL,

"Lies, damn lies, and statistics"

After-the-Election, what you will see within 30 Days is the "Certified Voter Count" from each County in every State in the USofA and the Certification by that State's Secretary of State or other state designee.

Most Electronic Voter "Systems" use 'individual' Stand-Alone Process-and-Tally Devises (Voting Machines).

Besides the 'rapid' Electronic Voter Count most 'systems' allow for a Paper Print-Out or Manual Recording of the Voter Tallies of 'each' and 'every' Voter Machine.

These Print-Outs or Tallies is forwarded to the County Register of Voters and ALL of the Print-Outs or Tallies are then Manually Added-Up as part of the Verification, Audit and Certification Process within the County.

Many of these "Questionable Votes" and "Voter Numbers" are 'originating' in Counties that are predominately Democrat and have Elected Registers of Voters who are Democrats.

ARE WE TO BELIEVE THAT ELECTED DEMOCRATS RIGGED THE US PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION FOR PRESIDENT GEORGE "W" BUSH ? ? ?

> The first sign of the rat was on election night. The jubilation of early exit polling had given way to rising anxiety as states fell one by one to the Red Tide. It was getting late in the smoky cellar of a Prague sports bar where a crowd of expats had gathered. We had been hoping to go home to bed early, confident of victory. Those hopes had evaporated in a flurry of early precinct reports from Florida and Ohio.
> By 3 AM, conversation had died and we were grimly sipping beers and watching as those two key states seemed to be slipping further and further to crimson. Suddenly, a friend who had left two hours earlier rushed in and handed us a printout.
> "Zogby's calling it for Kerry." He smacked the sheet decisively. "Definitely. He's got both Florida and Ohio in the Kerry column. Kerry only needs one." Satisfied, we went to bed, confident we would wake with the world a better place. Victory was at hand.
> The morning told a different story, of course. No Florida victory for Kerry--Bush had a decisive margin of nearly 400,000 votes. Ohio was not even close enough for Kerry to demand that all the votes be counted. The pollsters had been dead wrong, Bush had four more years and a powerful mandate. Onward Christian soldiers--next stop, Tehran.
> Lies, damn lies, and statistics
> I work with statistics and polling data every day. Something rubbed me the wrong way. I checked the exit polls for Florida--all wrong. CNN's results indicated a Kerry win: turnout matched voter registration, and independents had broken 59% to 41% for Kerry.
> Polling is an imprecise science. Yet its very imprecision is itself quantifiable and follows regular patterns. Differences between actual results and those expected from polling data must be explainable by identifiable factors if the polling sample is robust enough. With almost 3.000 respondents in Florida alone, the CNN poll sample was pretty robust.
> The first signs of the rat were identified by Kathy Dopp, who conducted a simple analysis of voter registrations by party in Florida and compared them to presidential vote results. Basically she multiplied the total votes cast in a county by the percentage of voters registered Republican: this gave an expected Republican vote. She then compared this to the actual result.
> Her analysis is startling. Certain counties voted for Bush far in excess of what one would expect based on the share of Republican registrations in that county. > this scenario Democratic turnout would have been only 51% in the optical scanning counties--barely exceeding half of Republican turnout. It also does not solve the enormous problems in individual counties. 7 counties in this scenario still have actual vote tallies for Bush that are at least 100% higher than predicted by the model--an extremely unlikely result.
> In the second scenario I assumed that Bush had actually got 100% of the vote from Republicans and 50% from independents (versus CNN polling results which were 93% and 41% respectively). If this gave enough votes for Bush to explain the county's results, I left the amount of Democratic registered voters ballots cast for Bush as they were predicted by CNN (14% voted for Bush). If this did not explain the result, I calculated how many Democrats would have to vote for Bush.
> In 41 of 52 counties, this did not explain the result and Bush must have gotten more than CNN's predicted 14% of Democratic ballots--not an unreasonable assumption by itself. However, in 21 counties more than 50% of Democratic votes would have to have defected to Bush to account for the county result--in four counties, at least 70% would have been required. These results are absurdly unlikely.
>
> A previously undiscovered species of rat, Republicanus cuyahogus, has been found in Ohio. Before the election, I wrote snide letters to a state legislator for Cuyahoga county who, according to media reports, was preparing an army of enforcers to keep ?suspect' (read: minority) voters away from the polls. One of his assistants wrote me back very pleasant mails to the effect that they had no intention of trying to suppress voter turnout, and in fact only wanted to encourage people to vote.
> They did their job too well. According to the official statistics for Cuyahoga county, a number of precincts had voter turnout well above the national average: in fact, turnout was well over 100% of registered voters, and in several cases well above the total number of people who have lived in the precinct in the last century or so.
> In 30 precincts, more ballots were cast than voters were registered in the county. According to county regulations, voters must cast their ballot in the precinct in which they are registered. Yet in these thirty precincts, nearly 100.000 more people voted than are registered to vote -- this out of a total of 251.946 registrations. These are not marginal differences--this is a 39% over-vote. In some precincts the over-vote was well over 100%. One precinct with 558 registered voters cast nearly 9,000 ballots. As one astute observer noted, it's the ballot-box equivalent of Jesus' miracle of the fishes. Bush being such a man of God, perhaps we should not be surprised.
> What to do?

> This is not an idle statistical exercise. Either the raw data from two critical battleground states is completely erroneous, or something has gone horribly awry in our electoral system--again. Like many Americans, I was dissatisfied with and suspicious of the way the Florida recount was resolved in 2000. But at the same time, I was convinced of one thing: we must let the system work, and accept its result, no matter how unjust it might appear.
> With this acceptance, we placed our implicit faith in the Bush Administration that it would not abuse its position: that it would recognize its fragile mandate for what it was, respect the will of the majority of people who voted against them, and move to build consensus wherever possible and effect change cautiously when needed. Above all, we believed that both Democrats and Republicans would recognize the over-riding importance of revitalizing the integrity of the electoral system and healing the bruised faith of both constituencies.
> This faith has been shattered. Bush has not led the nation to unity, but ruled through fear and division. Dishonesty and deceit in areas critical to the public interest have been the hallmark of his Administration. I state this not to throw gratuitous insults, but to place the Florida and Ohio electoral results in their proper context. For the GOP to claim now that we must take anything on faith, let alone astonishingly suspicious results in a hard-fought and extraordinarily bitter election, is pure fantasy. It does not even merit discussion.
> The facts as I see them now defy all logical explanations save one--massive and systematic vote fraud. We cannot accept the result of the 2004 presidential election as legitimate until these discrepancies are rigorously and completely explained. From the Valerie Plame case to the horrors of Abu Ghraib, George Bush has been reluctant to seek answers and assign accountability when it does not suit his purposes. But this is one time when no American should accept not getting a straight answer. Until then, George Bush is still, and will remain, the ?Accidental President' of 2000. One of his many enduring and shameful legacies will be that of seizing power through two illegitimate elections conducted on his brother's watch, and engineering a fundamental corruption at the very heart of the greatest democracy the world has known. We must not permit this to happen again.

You might be too idealistic, with Bush Admin, it proves that America is just like any former colonial empires -- sucks blood from the poor and weak and bring back the good. Iraq is now just like the Incas, the country is destroyed beyound belief.

Bush violates US laws and international laws -- history will be ultimate judge. He won the election because Americans are human, other losts are our gains.

Bush didn't win legitimately - he cheated.   The people reject him whenever they are informed about what Bush really is and does.
History will view Hitler's follower Bush no more favorably than it does Hitler himself.

UPS works for me.  In a few days it shows up on your doorstep.

I generally use J&R _for what they have_, as they're reputable (ie fix problems well, at least for me, on the odd time something goes wrong), didn't lay anybody off recovering from 9/11 down the block, and deserve support; as well as having good prices.

http://www.jr.com/JRProductPage.process?Product=1627439#productTabDetails

it says $129.99, which is the best price I've seen, right off the bat.

I get good service also from http://www.universal-radio.com

There are several problems with relying on the internet:

-If you are a broadcaster moving to the internet only, you are abandoning the people who can't afford to access the internet. If your target audience is on the internet, then that makes sense. If it's not, then you've lost that audience; permanently, most likely. Someone will fill that void, but if that new broadcaster has a differing point of view than you...

-Unlike shortwave where a listener can randomly tune the bands and can find something interesting, you actually have to search to find Radio Swiss International.
The internet is a true equalizer, but if you are a broadcaster and are used to people happening upon your station, you're going to be sadly disapppointed. People have to actively seek you out on the internet, as there is simply so much there that a broadcaster won't fall into an internet user's lap..

-A corollary to #2 above is that the internet plays a part in dividing people just as well as uniting people.  If you are on the net, you don't have to be exposed to opposing points of view if you don't want to, and you can choose to stay in your own little world and believe anything you read if you wish.  You can do that with shortwave, too, but if you get the shortwave "bug", by nature you'll be exposed to different ideas by trying to listen to various stations.

In it's own way, the print media is finding that trying to get people to subscribe to their websites (Washington Post comes to mind) when other items are free is a big drawback, and that I'd imagine that big shortwave broadcasters will find out the same rather shortly.

Were you more attentive, you'd know that's not necessary.

It's quite obvious that you can't begin to confirm that the election was fair.

Bush didn't win - he cheated.  No surprise there, for those who are aware.

Thank You One and All for your Replies.

Well I have the two Inverted "L" Antennas and the proof would be in the Doing by de-rigging one and wrapping the Antenna Wire around a Ferrite Core; so that the Coil will be at the Top of Vertical Up-Leg. Then doing some Side-by-Side Testing of the two Antennas.

NOTE: Taking a second look at the RF Systems "EMF" Antenna. The more I get the impression that it is susposed to be Rigged as a Vertical using the Coax Cable as a Counterpoise or may be as an Inverted "L" with the Coax Cable as the Vertical Up-Leg and the Antenna as the Horizontal Out-Arm.

once again thank you very much one and all ~ RHF

Everyone knows that license free walkie talkies were at 27MHz, ie CB, until the mid-seventies when 49MHz was added as a segment where they could be operated

The 11metre ham band, never an international band, was taken away from hams in 1958, and turned into the citizens band. So there would have been no overlap with the walkie talkies, and even if the band could have been shared, it would have been illegal to talk between the walkie talkies and a ham (it was also illegal to communicate between license free walkie talkies and CB, and it's the same with FRS on GMRS frequencies).

Interestingly, there was a time, up to 1972, where there was still an 11metre ham band in Canada. When CB was introduced here, the top few channels were not included, and they remained a ham band.

No, the story on the episode was just the usual garble of people who want a "good" story and don't care about detail.

But I didn't think the question was about whether it was technically possible.
One doesn't really need an explanation of how a ham might have CB equipment.

But it wouldn't have been legal, as you know. If he put his ham rig on CB, then he's breaking the law (because it's not type approved, because it has higher power, because it might be VFO controlled).

There is no reason how he could communicate with license free walkie talkies, except if there was an emergency.

It's Possible Herman's homebrew radio wasn't tuned very accurately and he ended up on the 11 meter CB bands commonly used by walkie talkies at the time.

Personally, I find this much more believable than Grandpa turning into a bat, or them having a fire breathing pet living under the stairs.

The real question is "Is there anything to listen to in the 30-60 MHz range?".

Probably not.  Although there are some cool uses of that frequency range like meteor scatter packet radio, nobody much seems to want to use it.  Last I knew, the US Forest Service and some of the rural power companies seemed to prefer it (land mobile FM) as it got out into the boonies better.  That, and cordless phones at 49 MHz.

There was a really good thread on the Wadley Loop in the rec.radio.amateur.homebrew newsgroup several years back.

The really cool feature was how the first oscillator was used to mix both the incoming RF (to the frequency range of the 1 MHz wide first IF), and (with another mixer) to tune one of the harmonics out of the comb generator into the range of a narrow bandpass filter.  This was amplified and mixed with a crystal oscillator (in such a way that the offset/drift of the first LO was inverted) and that was used as the second LO to mix the first IF down to the second IF's frequency range.
So as long as the harmonic of the reference was in the range of the synth's bandpass filter, the offset and drift of the first LO was canceled.

How good is a FRG-7 with intermod, though?

I use two Panasonic 12V 20 Amp Hour Gell Cells to power my radio equipment. I wish I had a R75, but I only have a R2000 and a DX398. I found a Lambda 5A adjustable power supply at the local mil surplus outlet for $10.00. I adjusted the output for 13.6V as suggested on the side of the Gell Cell for use in standby service. I could have used anything from a 2Amp through 20Amp power supply. I have seen 13.4 through 13.8 Volts specified, but I choose to go with what the voltage on the battery.
20 Amp hour means the battery will deliver 1 amp for 20 hours before the voltage drops to ~10.8V.
One big advantage of using a Gell Cell(or large NiCad or even a deep cycle lead acid) battery was demonstrated this morning.
At 5:30AM our AC mains went down. My wife aswaken me when her APAP (sleep apnea assisted resperator) alarm sounded as the power failed. I got up and went to my radio desk, turned on the back up desk illumination, some white LEDs to save power, phoned the the utility, and carried one of the gell cells to the bed room and connected her APAP to the battery. We picked her machine because it would also operate on +12V. She went back to sleep and I went back to the radio desk to try some DXing .
The only nice thing about the power failure was with the local substation down, the bands where nice and quite.
I listened for 2 hours and headed in to work.
My wife reconnected the battery to the power supply when she got up at 7:30 and found the power back on.
Having a decent standby battery pack sure beats lighting a candle or lanturn.
I use 4 pin XLR "microphone style" connectors for all of my DC power connections. They are farily cheap, $4~5 each, and will carry 15 amps PER pin. Even with my hame gear fired up and transmitting, I only draw 8 Amps. I even replaced the cigerette lighter socket in my Civic with a 4 pin female XLR.
I am going to add a better power fail alarm, one that will wait 5 or 6 minutes then drive a sonalert and turn on a LED flash light.
At 5:30 it is DARK!
Terry

I was shopping around for a small good am fm sw radio to use at work.  A repair shop in my city says he is clearing out a Nippon model MBR 789 radio for $99 Canadian.  I have looked high and low on the net and in usergroups to find a review and there are none to be found.  Anyone here have some info regarding this radio?

Other than Radio Shack, it's hard to find any local retailer selling shortwave radios. Your best bet is online.

I got to doubting the float voltage I mentioned so I did a quick net search and found this refference from Panasonic on charging gell cells.
I suspect it applies to deep cycle lead acids as well.
http://www.panasonic.com/industrial/battery/oem/images/pdf/
Panasonic_VRLA_ChargingMethods.pdf

The main point is that for float charge, AKA constant voltage, 0  degrees C 14.1V
25 degrees C 13.7V
40 degrees C 13.4V
I have charged my gell cell at 13.6V for several years with no problems.

Of course a regen rx can handle SSB.  My 3-tube set works fine on the 80m and 40m ham bands.  Naturally, the tuning needs an occasional tweak but once it has warmed up it will stay on an ssb signal for quite some time. Selectivity is not an issue - that is done at audio like a direct conversion set.  Tests by ZL2JJ have shown a good regen receiver to be as sensitive as many modern superhets.

The German military were using regen receivers* right through WW2 for AM and CW reception and if you can resolve CW you can handle SSB.

* For example the excellent Hagenuk Ha6K39b tranciever.

  If Bush was just like Hitler, he'd be all for backing extremist muslims in destroying the Jewish state of Israel. He'd be all for stem cell research, using non-causasian infants in involuntary abortions.  He'd be in favor of abolishing the second amendment.

I've posted explanations (or what I hoped were decent explanations) in the past to various newsgroups. Oddly, one of them landed on the Wadley Loop page, http://www.qsl.net/vk3jeg/b_wadley.html but whoever put it there had changed a word or two, so it looks like I'm saying the HRO-500 used a Wadley loop, when I was correcting someone who said it did.

> The really cool feature was how the first oscillator was used to mix both the incoming RF (to the frequency range of the 1 MHz wide first IF), and (with another mixer) to tune one of the harmonics out of the comb generator into the range of a narrow bandpass filter. This was amplified and mixed with a crystal oscillator (in such a way that the offset/drift of the first LO was inverted) and that was used as the second LO to mix the first IF down to the second IF's frequency range. So as long as the harmonic of the reference was in the range of the synth's bandpass filter, the offset and drift of the first LO was canceled.
> How good is a FRG-7 with intermod, though?

That's the question. It adds an extra mixer stage in the signal chain in order to get the "synthesizer". It is a neat arrangement, but just a few years later, the same effect came from having a PLL synthesizer out of the signal chain. Though as I write this, I do wonder if someone looked at the Wadley loop and wondered how to get rid of that extra mixer in the signal chain, and realized a bit of change would fix that. Obviously there is vast similarity between the Wadley loop and the synthesizer in the Galaxy and HRO-500, with that multiplier of the reference (and yes, comb would fit better there), and the need to tune the MHz knob to get a beat note.

The WHAT??!

France established influence in that region in the early 19th century, and created a unified government for what is now Vietnam in 1887. The US had precious little to do with Vietnam before the late fifties, certainly nothing like authority or control to turn over to anyone. The French were in control of everything but Japanese military bases there through 1945, then lost Hanoi to Ho Chi Minh but regained it the following year.

As usual, your liberal bullshit is easily debunked with a few Google clicks.

And the feminists control the pornographers. This whole thing _is_ starting to sound like a game of Illuminati.

WRONG! There is no requirement that that the envelope detector be linear. BFO and a Diode detector will work just fine for CW. It doesn't work very well at all on SSB unless the BFO signal level is much much greater than the SSB signal level.

Phase and waveform distortion have no impact the ability to receive CW.  They have a pretty serious impact on the SSB quality.

That would be an act of war.
Whichever nation tried that would very likely get bombed to bits by the U.S.

Remember when Clinton bombed Iraq because Saddam had tried to assassinate Bush 41?  And this Administration is a lot more hawkish than Clinton was.

Thanks - I started looking at the BBC site the other night but only found learning languages on TV before I quit. Am continuing the search - am interested in French, German, Spanish, Italian, and Gaelic.

Google is a good friend of mine, but there are so many entries.

Why is George Bush associated with Adolf Hitler and the Nazi's?

Certianly not for his policies agianst the Jews.  I can't think of any other leader in the world that is more friendly to Zionism.

GG,

There you go denigrating people who do not agree with you.

You just come across as MEAN SPIRITED and 'filled' with HATE !

You are a perfect example of the NEO-DEM Political Cadre; who are 'preachers' of Class Warfare, Hate Speech and Fear Mongering.

You apparently see anyone who does not feel and believe as you do as an Enemy-of-the-People.

You use the "F" Word {Fascist} as a Branding Iron to Burn a Scarlet Letter {To Label and To Condemn} on to People simply because you feel so Morally Superior to everyone.

Your actions in both the Written Word and Spoken Deed are losing you the Hearts and Minds of the very People who you claim to champion.

so say i, my opinions stated as facts ~ RHF

Wrong. Personally I like listening to news and programming from other countries. Other viewpoints on world events other than what the U.S. media wants to feed us.

Oh, I'm not married. I'm not that stupid.

<http://www.heavens-above.com> will generate information to allow identification of viewable satellites pre- or post-observation. Also google for mission planning software.

You might want to follow the <news:sci-astro-satellites.visual-observe> group for further info on identification resources. People often post questions of the form "I saw something traveling <direction> between <star1> and <connstellation2> on <date> at <time>. What might it have been?" In many cases, the object is identified by other posters, with a reference to the source of the information.

Does anyone know why? Are others receiving it?

Not US, as far as I know. My parents were from Ireland and they always used "quarter of" for a quarter to the hour. Also "ten (minutes) of" for minutes, etc. before the hour. Also quarter past and half past for after the hour.

Another of their time phrasings was "He's one age to her" meaning they were of the same age. None of those usages were common among the people I grew up with in California.

Note: After the coming of digital wristwatches, someone once said, "No one except a train conductor needs to know that it's eight thirty-seven."

I am sure that age may have something to do with it, but I have lived in all of those places, and those are generally how they are used. But like I said, you will hear any of them anywhere, but some are used more in some places.

The first link errored out but the second let me search for language lessons and the sw radio schedules are there (the URL is exactly the same as the

One word -- lawyers.

As for multiple languages, I once worked for an outfit that had rolls of "GARBAGE" stickers to peel off and apply to boxes or bags to be thrown out. The word for garbage was also written in about eight other languages, including Spanish, Veitnamese, chinese, etc. Someone once became offended that the word was in so many languages. I explained to him, "The word GARBAGE is in English because that's the only language you speak. The rest are because none of your kids will apply for the job, Whitey."

It's supposedly related to Hungarian somewhere in the dark misty past. The beauty of those languages is that it's a phonetic alphabet. Once you know what the letters are, you can pretty well say any word you can read. Understanding them is the harder work.

With all those carets (sp?) or umlauts above most vowels, you may get a total of over thirty letters. It's a small price to pay not to have to have all those stupid 'laws' in English grammar, most of which aren't rules at all.

Here's mike's law:

The reason that Bush is associated with Hitler is that both were Authoritarians. They believe(d) in absolute rule with no dissent. They are/were both right wing. Stalin was an Authoritarian but leftwing (yes both leftwing and rightwing can be bad - it is the Authoritarian quality that is not good for humans in general). Both use fear to motivate their base. Who the scapegoat is doesn't matter. It is the use of fear/hate/bias. For Hitler it was the Jewish people, gays, Gypsies and then non-Arians. Bush et al use 'liberals' and 'gays'.

Clear enough?

Not the right one. A twenty-sixer is a roughly a fifth of the US (128 ounces) gallon. The proper Gallon has 160 ounces.

26 liquid ounces is roughly 750 cc, or 3/4 liter.

It was just a reminder to CW that he most likely didn't believe the US could set up torture and death camps until the evidence started coming out...heck, he probably STILL denies it.

He may well be right about my idiocy, but I've NEVER gone to the lengths that GW Bush has to show the whole world. The man is a cretin of the first order. A murderous one at that.

Oh.  Poor little fascist.  You're upset because there are still a few Americans who don't want to lay down while you trash the constitution and turn America into a police state.

So let me make it clear to you.  Real liberals and Real Republicans don't feel "mean spirited" toward differing views on how America should exist within the context of our constitution.  But when a group of revolutionary theocratic fascists show up and try to destroy the country, we get real "mean spirited."

So take your feigned righteous indignation and shove it.

As far as I'm concerned, you're nothing but a traitor to your country so long as you support Bush.

I realize that this question has nothing to do with shortwave, but could not think of another group to post this question.  I read several posts here and this seems like a knowledgable group so here goes...

Our church is planning to purchase a translation system that will transmit on the regular FM band.  I am looking for recomendations for mini digital FM radios that cost around $20.  I was looking at the Coby CX-9, but am rather leary of buying it without recommendations.  Has anyone tried this radio before, or does anyone have a better sugestion?  It would not be a big deal to buy one to try it out, but we need 20 matching radios and I would prefer to buy them in one purchase.

Ron Wiebe

i may do the install myself. i'll have to take a look inside first. shortwave shop installed the daut. board prior to shipment. i will look closer at the 330S. i'm also more on the SW bands. by the way, which size torque fits the screws

I wonder if he was asking about the bit where you said:

"All that notwithstanding, I agree with Bradley B's observation of 'JuLiE-of-the-mystery-chromosome'."

Just what exactly was Bradley's observation?

If General George Patton were alive and President of the USA, this would be his Fireside Speech:

My fellow Americans:

As you all know, the defeat of Iraq's regime has been completed.

Since congress does not want to spend any more money on this war, our mission in Iraq is complete. This morning I gave the order for a complete removal of all American forces from Iraq. This action will be complete within 30 days. It is now time to begin the reckoning.

Before me, I have two lists. One list contains the names of countries, which have stood by our side during the Iraq conflict. This list is short: The United Kingdom, Spain, Bulgaria, Australia, Norway and Poland are some of the countries listed there. The other list contains everyone not on the first list. Most of the world's nations are on that list. My press secretary will be distributing copies of both lists later this evening.

Let me start by saying that effective immediately, foreign aid to those nations on List 2 ceases immediately and indefinitely. The money saved during the first year alone will pretty much pay for the costs of the Iraqi war.

The American people are no longer going to pour money into third world hell holes and watch those government leaders grow fat on corruption. Need help with a famine? Wrestling with an epidemic? Call France. In the future, together with Congress, I will work to cut taxes and solve some local problems.

On that note, a word to terrorist organizations: Screw with us and we will hunt you down and eliminate you and all your friends from the face of the earth. Thirsting for a gutsy country to terrorize? Try France, or maybe China. To Israel and the Palestinian Authority: You boys, work out a peace deal now. Just note that Camp David is closed. Maybe all of you can go to Russia for negotiations. They have some great palaces there. Big tables, too.

I'm ordering the immediate severing of diplomatic relations with France, Germany, and Russia. Thanks for all your help, comrades. We are retiring from NATO as well. Bon chance, mes amis.

I have instructed the Mayor of New York City to begin towing the many UN diplomatic vehicles located in Manhattan with more than two unpaid tickets to sites where those vehicles will be stripped, shredded and crushed. I don't care about whatever treaty pertains to this. Pay your tickets tomorrow or watch your precious Benzes, Beamers, and limos be turned over to some of the finest chop shops in the world. I love New York.

A special note to our neighbors. Canada is on List 2. Since we are going to be seeing a lot more of each other, you folks might want to try not pissing us off for a change. Mexico is also on List 2. President Fox and his entire corrupt government really need an attitude adjustment. I have a couple of extra tank and infantry divisions sitting around. Guess where I'm gonna put 'em? Yep, border security. So start doing something with your oil. Oh, by the way, the United States is abrogating the NAFTA treaty--starting now. It is time for America to focus on its own welfare and its own citizens. Some will accuse us of isolationism. I answer them by saying darn tootin'. Nearly a century of trying to help folks live a decent life around the world has only earned us the undying enmity of just about everyone on the planet. It is time to cut taxes here because we will not be spending on other people's problems.

To the nations on List 1, a final thought. Thanks guys. We owe you. To the nations on List 2, a final thought. Drop dead. God bless America.

Thank you and good night.

My 7030 uses an allen (hex) wrench for the case screws.

You can also use filters intended for the Racal 6790/gm or 6830 - though they're large, and you'll need to hook them up with something like RG-174. An advantage to using milspec filters is you're likely to be able to get a better shape factor than you can on ones intended for the consumer market.

If you'd like I could shoot a picture of how I installed the larger filters in mine and put it up on my web space, but it'll take a couple days for me to get around to it.

This site obviously wants to cloud the issue:

There seems to be something worthwhile in even the most obscure of postings..

Exactly.  It's my pleasure to "cross the aisle" and to agree with an excellent example of a thinking conservative on this issue of content.

Otherwise, this interesting and challenging list could devolve into a bunch of wankers discussing their rigs.

The self-appointed Wouff-Hongs, like JuLiE-of-the-mystery-chromosome, are free to ignore the posts that do not meet their needs.

And, oh yeah, keep listening, and 73,

Patton was a lot brighter than you give him credit for. He wanted to keep going through Europe and get the commies while they were still spread out. Certain vested interests in Washington prevented him from assuring that NO cold war could ever happen.

It's hard to make billions in defence contracts when there's no possibility of conflict. ..contrived or otherwise.

Suspect they are not on air.
In fact, currently I am only receiving AFN from Guam and Pearl Harbour

Its high summer here now, so reception is not good anyway

The original poster's problem was not with the word "quarter", but with the word "of".  The phrase "a quarter of nine" is completely meaningless... what exactly is one-fourth of nine o'clock, anyway? 9:15?  But "a quarter of nine" actually means 8:45.

Well if it was double-conversion one might expect better performance (though it's no guarantee since it could be a badly designed double-conversion receiver).

The sad part is that a lot of the low end single conversion receivers aren't radically different from low end single conversion receivers from thirty years ago or from 50 years ago, with the big difference being solid stage and synthesized tuning.  If they used a design where the IF was higher in frequency, they could get rid of much of the image problems without losing IF selectivity.

Actually, depending on your region and the type of monitoring you enjoy, there are a number of types of signals to be heard in this range if you're patient, or just curious.
You could listen to the windows at just about any fast food place between 30 and 35 MHz... no, it's not exactly riveting stuff to be sure, but it's there. Sometimes it's interesting to see how many people actually order McDonald's, or Taco Bell,  after 2 am, and what they eat at that time. Gives me an idea of why many folks in my area are somewhat chubby.

Also, during Spring and Summer, when conditions are right, you can hear cabs in NY, or Mexico, or Cincinnati for all I know... or dispatchers and units from very un-local police and emergency services. This occupies the same space of 30 to about 35  MHz. I can recall many times over the last few years, during early Spring and late Summer, hearing hours worth of police and EMS comm's from the northeast (I'm in SW MO), when they were dealing with flooding rains in PA, CT, OH and IN. It's very interesting DX... but no, it's not regular.

OF course, there is the 6 mtr amateur band, which doesn't get a lot of use in my neck of the woods. Oh yeah, and cordless phones/intercoms/baby monitors in the 48 to 50 MHz range.

I like to use my R75's 30 - 60 MHz range as an addendum to my base scanner, when there is something going on in town, or when conditions are bringing in DX in that range, and I can switch between the two receivers to catch whatever short burst comm's are flying my way.

But again, if you're not into DXing/waiting, or fast food and intercoms, then there isn't much to listen to on any regular basis.

there used to be. Back in the early to mid 80's, my local police department was somewhere in the 30-40 MHZ range.

There's still some stuff to hear in the 30 to 54 MHZ range.

Although that probably depends on your area.

At least here there is still some stuff transmitting there.

not true. My radio scanner proves that the cable companies are not shielded.

Even when driving to the next county over, which is a different cable company, I still pick up the cable tv transmissions on my scanner, through the air.

And even driving to the next city over, which is a third cable company, I still pick up the transmissions through the air.

NOne of them are shielded.

It ruins trying to listen to the communications bands on a bunch of frequencies above 30 MHZ.

Reporting it doesn't do any good, as all of the cable companies refuse to fix it.

Yes. My response was intentionally simplified. Making a directional antenna is often not a viable option for an SWL, because they typically operate over a wide frequency range, and want to receive signals from many directions. This pretty much limits them to something like a rotatable log periodic antenna. Wire antennas can be made directional, but typically only in fixed or a small number of directions, and with directional patterns that change with frequency. Within the range of discussion, then, I don't believe it's realistic to attempt a directional antenna. The advertised antenna certainly doesn't produce any advantage in this regard.

In addition to the cable leak interfering with listening to communications above 30 MHZ, it also interferes with listening to AM broadcast and shortwave bands even worse because of all of the buzzing caused by it on AM and shortwave.

Just to make s ure that the problem wasn't in my radio, I also checked my other radios (AM and FM bands).

The buzzing was still present on the AM radio on every radio I have.  So the problem was definitely not in my radio.

When I do get far enough out oif the area, the buzzing stops and AM can be picked up mnormally.

However, I normally don't drive out of the area that far.

I usually stay either at home or within the area.

Shortwave radio bands, ignored by commercial broadcasters because of their low fidelity, have long been home to government activity -- whether for national broadcasts such as the BBC World Service, Voice of America and Radio France International, or propaganda broadcasts from the likes of Radio Havana or the U.S.-backed Radio Free Iraq.

Meanwhile, for the last 30 years an altogether more curious kind of international station has been noted on the airwaves.

Radio Netherlands' Ehard Goddijn drew our attention to a very strong SSB signal on 7360 kHz noted in progress at 1230 UTC, carrying the NRK domestic service in parallel with 1314 kHz mediumwave.

The SSB was replaced by a silent carrier at 1240, then the modulation resumed at 1251 UTC.

I just remembered when the cable leak interference started here at my home.

Early last year, I still recieved AM and shortwave as normal,from home, without any of that type of interference, no buzzing.

Then later last year, the cable company came and switced all of their wires around to fiber-optic cable to improve reception.

Well, that's what the cable guys working on the lines said they were doing, switching the cable to fiber-optic cable.

And that was right when I started having the cable leakage problems, from home.

Ever since they switched to fiber-optic cable is when I started having all of the interference problems of buzzing on AM and shortwave radio when listening from home, making the bands almost totally useless.

I'm guessing the other cable companies in the area are also using "fiber-optic cable".

I think the reason why many international broadcasters are phasing out their shortwave services is because they are catching on to the fact that very few members of the public, aside from radio hobbyists, are listening.  It simply doesn't make financial sense for the governments of these countries to continue pumping mega-money into these facilities just so a radio hobbyist overseas can add another entry into their logbooks.  Most DX'ers could care less about the actual program content.

For them the fun is in capturing an elusive signal.

I realize there are still many places in the world that rely on SW due to remote locations, local regulations, etc. Those places are the ones the government SW broadcasters should focus on. In most urban areas in most countries, local FM dominates the listening habits of the general public. Here in the USA, in my neck of the woods, hardly anyone listens to MW/AM any more. I remember a friend of mine being absolutely astounded that my car radio could pick up WCBS-AM 880 in NYC. She thought I had some kind of special supercharged radio. I would have shown her how to get the BBC and really impressed her if I'd had my shortwave reciever with me. But the BBC World Service is available on local FM here, in stereo with no atmospheric interference, so why bother?

Like it or not, international shortwave broadcasting is slowly going the way of the LP vinyl record. It is much more cost-effective to beam programming overseas via satellite then rebroadcast it on local FM. As broadband internet becomes more widely deployed, look for it to become another similar medium.

Before you get out your flamethrowers, I want to state for the record that I am an SW listener and I much prefer to use radios that glow in the dark and get warm. But unfortunately we are in the minority there.

Watch for more international megawatt broadcasters to shut down as this trend continues.

Yeah, I just moved from Raleigh and aside from Radio Shack, which carries a few Grundig models, the internet is going to be your only source. Good luck and 73.

Tell them you're getting their programming for free because they have leaky systems.  That'll change their tune real fast.  Time Warner locally has been well known for being exceptionally greedy about that sort of thing.

loser kerry had more people vote AGAINST him than any other canidate ever.... dems LOST seats in house and senate, repubs control governorship as well..

i wonder, did the republicans commit fraud in ALL these elections? or is it possible the democrats just plain LOST...

BTW, any time you want to talk about fraud, dead people voted for kennedy TWICE back in the 60 election, but you never want to mention that do you.....

There are no frequency limitations for equipment in New Zealand. It's much more liberal than US, UK etc, that way. Sure, you're not allowed to listen to, for example, cell phones, but it is not illegal to own equipment that is capable of doing so.

Interestingly, the term "O'Clock" is a term that has survived in English since mediaeval times. It is a contraction of "of the clock". So, for example, "nine o'clock" is a shortened version of nine of the clock".

Democrats founded America and the right wing fought against it including the Bush Family as they did again in WW2 when they sided with Hitler.  We just hate a republican America

Do you always work backwards like this in forming an opinion?

For example, you hear that there are questions about the legitimacy of an election, you look to see who is certifying election results and if that person is from the same political party as the loser then the questions of legitimacy must be dismissed?

Are there any others reading this that do the same thing?

Hitler and the Arabs were allies in WW2 and by the way despite Bush's promises we are still saddled with gun control.  Its not rocket science to repeal all those laws, just write a bill that says this law repeals every gun control law passed since 1950.

One has to wonder if a bomb won't go off under the stands on Jan 7th?
I'd rather see him impeached and imprisoned myself.

Your post raises an interesting topic. The relation between the sun, a compass and an analogue watch (or clock) is an equation. If you have any two of these three items, the third can be determined.

For example, if you can see the sun, and you are wearing an analogue watch, you can determine true North. Or, if you have a compass, and you can see the sun, you can determine what time it is.

Remember, that it is a watch or clock that is used to determine longitude also. First, you set your watch to midday exactly as the sun reaches the highest point in the sky (Note: your watch is now set to sidereal time and not mean time).

Next, sail (for simplicity) due East. Next day, when the sun is at its highest, see what the time is on your watch. Let's say its 11 o'clock. Then you have travelled 15 degrees East of where you started (remembering that 360 degrees of longitude divided by 24 hours is 15 degrees per hour).

No navigator would be seen without his/her analogue watch!

Finally, a question: There is a time zone in the world which is set to UTC. And there are 12 times zones which are ahead of UTC (+1, +2, etc) (and, yes, some partial hour variations too). And there's 12 timezones which are less than UTC (-1, -2, etc). That adds up to 25 time zones. Yet there's only 24 hours in a day! What's going on? (Hint: the timezone at my location holds the answer)

Mark.
Auckland, New Zealand, which is currently UTC + 13 hours.

     Good point. On the other hand, the opposite lesson can also be drawn from other shows. I remember seeing an interview with an emergency room nurse who frequently sees young people coming in with gunshot wounds. She says many are surprised that getting shot just once hurts and that you can't simply keep advancing on the one shooting you, taking multiple hits, until you're close enough to take him out.

Im just about ready to give up on radio due to newly introduced "mystery" static in my area.... S-9 worth of noise! But before I give up on my ham and SWL career I would like to give it a last shot and try a noise cancelling unit.

I would like to hear all the input you guys can give me on one of these units, which one works better and do they really work as advertised?

Thanks...Gil

I'm from the EAST (PA & NJ).  All of the above (Radio Flyer's) examples have been and are still used.  I think they are 'age' related, not regionally

Jim:
Which version of SWLog do you have??

I upgraded and my operating system (a garage sale derived 'puter with a XP pro OS of dubious origins which refuses all updates editions earlier than the latest SWOLOG work fine,cause I successively upgraded off them.

   I'm trying to find the whole SWLog file for a version preceeding the current issue so I  can reload and start from scratch

If those zipfiles are still around you could save my swl'in butt

How do I find them? Are they listed on any websites or do I need to buy a

This reminds me of Summer Y2K when I was in Honolulu trying to talk to a man in WA. I got his wife and left a message which included a request that he call me after 11 a.m. his time since I was 3 hours behind and wanted to be awake and functioning when we talked.

So, he calls me the next morning at 5 a.m. HST/8 a.m. PDT because he figured that his wife surely got the message wrong since nobody's west of WA <g-r-o-a-n>.

Oh, I was just being a smart-ass with that guilty remark. I wouldn't really expect it either.

Hell, no. It's good to be king. Or so I'm told. I'd sure like to know first hand, though.

Not at all. I took it just as he said it, and assumed that Stair was just displaying a bit of braggadocio. I don't see Darren as the baiting type.

Do you know that it's going to be a jury trial?

Naw...guys like Stair are always thinking they'll get protection in the face of their enemas...uh, enemies. I don't believe that their mind-set includes being spirited off to safety out of reach of their foes, even if it -is- to the right hand of God which is where I'll bet Stair thinks he'll end up.

I can guess why. You probably have so many wedgies owed to you that "going commando" is your only protection. I don't understand you guys that don't wear undies, or wear boxers instead of tighty-whitie's.

All bragging aside, I need the support. ;) Of course, I only wear the cotton briefs on weekdays. Saturdays and Sundays, it's chainmail for me, baby!

That's what it looks like when you don't wear underwear?? Two guys pointing loaded weapons at each other? And -I'm- the sick-o? <g>

And that's exactly what I'd do if I lived in Michigan. ;)

I read the manual on this and it covers all the meter bands from 2.3 to 26.1 MHz.    The Canadian RS has this as "Coming Soon " in their list of SW radios.
My guess is that anything at that price that does SW, AM/FM, Wx and TV all in one box would be like the jack of all trades and master of none.

Julie, I usually stop by 3210khz, once a night while cruising the trops. The best parts of the transmissions, are usually the commercials. I've got it on now at 0607 UTC, and it's pushing 50dB/S-9, here in the Chicago suburbs. Good

THAT part I CAN believe.  I heard somewhere, probably SW, that the feds pay the court system so much for EVERY case they CLOSE.  For this reason, in addition to monetary reasons, they love to plea bargain.  A person can be charged with three murders and if there's the slightest doubt in their minds they'll let him plea it down to one involuntary manslaughter!  There NO JUSTICE in that kind of bargaining!  (Check out Isaiah chapter 1.  It tells of some rottenness but in verse 26 the judges are to be restored as at the first, thus indicating a period when the judges were NOT judges.  Of course that is very well demonstrated a few verses prior.)

Besides that, someone probably got to the young women and "explained" to them how they were going to look like whores AND complete idiots when they got through cross examining them in front of the "whole world"! Either that or Bro. Stair decided to show his generosity by giving them some money. Others probably told them how they were not to go to court against a brother, before infidels, and/or how they were really going to hurt God's work by bringing this man down to shame and possibly to his grave.

I listened to him a short time off and on today to see if I could confirm what you said.  Much of what I heard was REALLY OLD tapes he made back in the '80's probably.

I look forward to seeing what the "official" version of the case is. Also, seeing what The Net Team and Remnant's Hope have to post on it - if they do.  This will have turned out so differently from what they apparently had wanted that they may just ignore it or provide a lot of reasons why it never should have been decided this way.  Personally, as the old saying goes, "I don't have a dog in this fight!"

The Electoral College was installed to prevent just that from happening. In that way, New York can't push North Dakota around.

The Bill of Rights and the Constitution were written in such a way as to protect the minority from the abuse of the majority.

Like the man said:

Real Democracy is two wolves and a sheep voting on what to have for lunch.

Added to by Edward R. Murrow:

A nation of sheep will beget a government of wolves.

Let's see how life on the other side is. Republicans were squelched just that way since about 1962. But to all appearances, the Repubs aren't doing it as effectively.

Welcome to my life. The only representation I ever had in the Senate
state. Although I finally have a reasonable rep in the House now...

The best one is the Drake SW8. It's out of production but can be found on the used market for about $450. It has a handle and can be powered by internal 'D' batteries in addition to an AC adapter. The later version (starting with 1996) is the best choice because of the improved sync' detector.

Greetings, This one has been rolling in at a steady S-6, on the JRC NRD-535D, here in the Midwest USA. It's an easy copy, with a well modulated signal. Anyone had any luck QSL'ing this station. Good DXing to you, Gary

Phone line as SW antenna

Bill McFadden
billmc@agora.rdrop.com

Changes preceded by "|".

WARNINGS AND DISCLAIMERS

Connecting unapproved devices to phone lines may be illegal in your area. Telephone lines present a potential shock hazard.  Do not use this antenna for transmitting.  Use at your own risk.

INTRODUCTION

This article describes how to use a phone line as a shortwave receiving antenna.  Performance will vary depending on the kind of phone line you have.  Overhead lines usually make okay antennas, while underground lines usually don't.  A phone line antenna will generally pick up more power line noise than a dedicated antenna, so don't expect to use it for DX work.  Nevertheless, I find that it outperforms the telescopic whip antennas built into most portables.

A reader sent in this suggestion:  If you're concerned about connecting the phone line directly to the receiver, try wrapping the phone cord several times around the receiver's telescopic whip antenna instead. Performance may not be as good as a direct connection, but it will probably be better than the whip antenna by itself.

Someone else wrote asking about lightning protection.  I haven't thought much about it because thunderstorms are rare in my area.  Most phone lines have lightning arrestors on them where they enter the house, but the lightning arrestors may pass enough energy during a lightning strike damage a receiver.  My suggestion is to disconnect the antenna when not in use if you experience frequent thunderstorms.

HOW TO DO IT

The simplest connection is a single capacitor between the phone line and receiver. The capacitor eliminates all phone line voltages, including ringing, so that they will not harm the receiver.

 Phone line                                    RF connector
    red          .01 uF     center cond.            / \
     or   o--------||------------------------------|-o |  To receiver
   green                                            \ /
                           50 ohm coax               |
   ground                                            |
     or   o------------------------------------------+ N.C.                      shield

N.C. = no connect. I originally connected the phone line ground (yellow wire) to this terminal, but reception was better without it (if you do this, play it safe and put a .01 uF capacitor in series). If another ground is available, you can connect it to this terminal.

If you are picking up local AM or FM radio stations on the shortwave bands, it is likely that your receiver is overloaded. Inexpensive and portable receivers usually lack the filtering needed to eliminate this interference, but you can make your own filters. Filters can also be purchased from some shortwave dealers.

A high-pass filter can be used to remove signals below the shortwave bands. It rejects interference from local AM stations and presents a high impedance to the phone line at audio frequencies so that the phone line remains balanced.

A low-pass filter can be used to remove signals above the shortwave bands. It rejects interference from FM and TV stations, as well as VHF 2-way radio transmitters. If you use both filters, connect the output of the first filter to the input of the second (don't forget to connect their ground terminals together). It doesn't matter which filter is connected first.

By the way, these filters also work well with random wire antennas. Just connect the antenna in place of the phone line.

The filter(s) should be connected to the phone line in this manner:

 Phone line                                    RF connector
    red         --------    center cond.            / \
     or   o----|        |--------------------------|-o |  To receiver
   green       |        |                           \ /
               | FILTER |  50 ohm coax               |
   ground      |        |                            |
     or   o----|        |----------------------------+

FILTER PLANS

Subject: BC Band Hi-Pass Filter

The following ascii-schematic diagram is a high pass filter that will filter out Broadcast Band (MW) stations. I found it a great boon to my shortwave listening since local MW stations overload my ATS-803A front end & appear in SW, especially with a long antenna.

If you remember my antenna saga, I went from 50 feet to 150 feet & had overload problems causing me to cut back to 50 feet. (Even at 50 feet, I still have some MW interference). I took the advice of Gary Coffman and looked up filters in the ARRL Handbook. With the filter in place, I intend to try to increase my antenna length again.

Anywho, here is the filter, for interested parties.

--------||---+----||-----+----||-----------
             }           }
             {           {
             }           }
-------------+-----------+----------------

The outer capacitors are 1500 pf ceramic disks.
The inner capacitor is 820 pf ceramic disk.
The squiggly things are coils (two total). Each one is 2.7 uh.
(a close value will do).

Subject: Re: BC Band Hi-Pass Filter

I built the filter that Paul Blumstein posted recently and measured it on a gain-phase analyzer. Here are its characteristics:

|---|---|
| 100 kHz | -120dB |
| 500 kHz | -68dB |
| 1000 kHz | -38dB |
| 1600 kHz | -15dB |
| 2100 kHz | -3dB |

The source and load impedances were 50 ohms. Because the filter has five elements, the attenuation is 30dB per octave. The measurements confirmed this.

This filter seems to be a good compromise between interference attenuation and passband response. There is very little attenuation in the 120m band and above. It could use a little more attenuation at the upper end of MW, which could be done with more stages or a higher cutoff frequency. Alternatively, you could build two of these filters and put them in series. (Since two 1500pF capacitors in series are really 750pF, you could eliminate one cap.)

Just for fun, I put 470 ohms in series with the input to see how the filter performed with an antenna mismatch. The response was:

|---|---|
| 100 kHz | -105dB |
| 500 kHz | -60dB |
| 1000 kHz | -35dB |
| 1600 kHz | -15dB |
| 2300 kHz | -3dB |

These figures are normalized to the passband response of -15dB, which is due to the impedance mismatch between the source and load and would have been there without the filter. Hence, the filter works almost as well in spite of the mismatch, which is good news to those who use long-wire antennas.

Subject: Construction of filters for SW reception

Several people have asked for construction details of the filters I built for my DX-440.

The high-pass filter helped some, but in my location the VHF/UHF broadcasters are also causing problems. So, I dug out the ARRL handbook and chose a 7-element Chebyshev low-pass design that is -3 dB at 35 MHz, -20 dB at 43 MHz, and -50 dB at 64 MHz (all calculated; it works well in practice!)

            LOW-PASS FILTER  (Rejects FM, TV, etc.)

                    0.36 uH  0.42 uH   0.36 uH signal  -------+--UUU--+--UUUUU--+--UUU--+-------  signal
                  |       |         |       |
             82  ___  180___    180___     ___  82 pF  ---   pF---     pF---     ---  pF shield         |       |         |       |         shield braid  -------+-------+----+----+-------+-------  braid
                         chassis ground

I had to do a little more improvising at this point. I used .33 uH instead of .36, and .66 uH instead of .42, but it works fine.

The 5-lug terminal strips were perfect for these circuits, since there are 4 lugs plus a grounded lug. All "ground" connections go to the lug that is mounted to the chassis, and the other 4 lugs are used for each of the connections on the signal line. One terminal strip is used per filter. Since both filters were necessary to clean up the hash, I am going to put them both into one box when I get the time.

The proper way to connect them is in series, i.e.

signal in ------- filter 1 -------- filter 2 -------- signal out

There is no difference between ends. They are "bilateral" which means you can't possibly hook them up backwards. (In the above schematics, left and right ends are interchangeable.)

COIL WINDING

You can make the coils yourself using this formula:

$$L = 0.2 * B^2 * N^2 / (3B + 9A + 10C)$$

$L$ is the inductance, in uH
$A$ is the length of the coil, in inches
$B$ is the mean diameter of the coil, in inches
$C$ is the diameter of the wire, in inches
$N$ is the number of turns

For small wire, you can assume $C = 0$.

Handy Shortwave Chart

billmc@agora.rdrop.com

Band allocations and time zone conversions for the USA. Includes broadcast bands used outside the USA. Also includes WARC-92 broadcast band extensions, which may be used before April 1, 2007 on a secondary (non-interference) basis. For multi-use bands, most common usage is shown. Some stations operate outside the official bands. Information is from Sep 2000 NTIA allocations table, see:
http://www.ntia.doc.gov/osmhome/allochrt.html

Frequencies are in kHz. Usual spacing in shortwave broadcast bands is 5 kHz. Frequencies above 10000 kHz tend to propagate better during the day; frequencies below 10000 kHz tend to propagate better at night.

I previously assumed it would be.  Now, I don't know that there'll even be a "trial" - perhaps just a "decision"!  ;-)

NOTE if you listen to high quality AM audio only, then this rig is not for you - stick with your Drake R8B for the best audio sound

----- Would certainly disaggree with that statement.  The r-8's have an active filter in the audio section cutting off at 5,000 Hz.  Take an Icom 756 PRO, open the IF to 9KHz (a Drake can't do that, either)....sounds much better.  The PRO 6KHz AM filter selection sounds very much like the -8B.  ------

If you only listen to 'high quality AM' signals then you certainly don't need a '756 nor a R8x...

Save your money.

Don't mince words, Tulip Boy. If you're not FROM Holland, Michigan, then you are IN Holland Michigan. Isn't that where the local militia was planning to kill some members of the police force?

Dale,

AFAIK, even for the HF225, Lowe recommended no more than a 10m wire for an antenna. I've never used my 225 with more than about a 50 ft wire and it certainly never showed any symptoms of overload, and I think your point about EU vs US SW environment is well taken.

An earlier poster on this thread cited the WRTH handbook and pointed out that the synchronous detector on the 125/225 was not single sideband, and that's true as far as it goes. I have both a 2010 and the Lowe and I find the Lowe to be much easier to use in crowded bands despite the lack of selectable sideband - its IF filters work very nicely esp. compared with the 2010's pathetic stock filters, and its stability and audio quality in SSB mode make the lack of sideband synch less of an issue.

It's about 4 years since I bought my Yupi, so I decided to take a look at what's available now.

If I was in the market, a radio I'd be taking a closer look at is the Yaesu VX-7R.

It's smaller than most of the others folks have mentioned, and it's a ham HT so it may have better selectivity on HF.  It's priced about $10-20 higher than the VX-500 wideband receiver.  It comes with a Lithium Ion battery.

Unfortunately, it didn't turn up when I did a quick look at the Strong Signals web site.

I wouldn't get one without checking it's reputation fairly carefully, as the Yaesu VR-5000 looked nice on phosphor, but got lackluster reviews for hf performance.

So, Tulip boy..you'd like us to to do as YOU have to do? I think not. When you reach puberty, you MAY get some more privileges, but until then just do as mom says, ok? She has your best interest at heart, even though you were born out of wedlock and diseased at birth.

Every other person I've met with Foetal Alcohol Syndrome has had my sympathy, prayers and best wishes. Why not you? Must be your generally crappy attitude towards your fellow human beings. It must suck to be so mentally twisted.

That's wonderful news!  I'm sure this matter has been a burden to the Prophet as the trial date neared.  I don't think the Prophet has predicted a major doomsday for the entire year of 2004.  This is particularly disappointing since the Prophet predicted two major doomsdays in 2003, Planet X and the Nuclear, Biological and Chemical attacks inside the US triggered by the Iraq invasion.  And the Prophet worked in a minor doomsday which caught my interest, the Nuclear destruction of Chicago by Al Qaeda. Also, 2003 had the Prophet digging into his bin of Golden Oldies, and he pulled out his Pope of Rome Prophesy.

Let's all hope a reinvigorated Last Day Prophet of God has an outstanding year in 2005.  I'm looking forward to the end of the world every month for a whole year!!

Twisted? Heck, I simply have an aversion to 'tard boys. Especially Canadian ones!

If I spoke French, I could try - this station reaches my U.S. West Coast QTH about as well as any African station (except beaten slightly by 9,580 Afrique Numero Uno, 4,845 Ramadan Mauritanie and - once upon a time - Nigeria on 49 and 19 meters).  Copy is often clear and easy.

If you try, the best of fortune, and please let us know how you fare.

The Grundig Satellit 800 also allows tuning with a tuning knob.
The reception circuitry on the inside is the same as the SW8.
Also, the older Grundigs, the Sat 700 and 650, would probably qualify.  I've never listened to them, but I imagine that they've good audio fidelity.

The Lowe 150 also had a tuning knob.

I tell you who's disappointed besides us if the profit skates.

The young "brothers" at CCI.

All those wigs.

All that Vaseline.

And no profit.

Plus they gotta give back all the raffle money.

Bummer.

That is generally a tough verification. Tried here numerous times, but never any luck. My last try was in January.

Good luck

Has anybody tried out any of those amplified antennas for shortwave and AM radios,are they any good? Any reccomendations? (except those cheapo Tiny Tuners that use a 9 volt battery,I own one of those and I know it isn't any good) I see that CCrane company sells a twin ferrite antenna,are they any good?

The Palstar R30 is a very compact tabletop that can run on 10 internal AA batteries.  People with fat fingers say the buttons are a bit too small or close together, but it's got a reputation as a simple radio that performs quite well. They run $575-$650 depending on if you get one or two Collins brand filters with it.

When I was looking for a better "portable", I looked for a Lowe HF-150 Europa - never found one.  The regular HF-150's turn up used reasonably often.  The HF-150 has appreciated in value over the last few years.

You might find a used AOR AR7030+ for about $1,000.  AOR sold a lead acid battery that could fit inside - I run mine off NIMH RC car battery packs - it's a very nice radio.

Otherwise, I'd go with the post '96 Drake SW8 over the Grundig Satellite 800  in part because the Drake has nice build quality, and in part because the Sat 800 is about the size of an "Urban Assault" boom box.  A few years back there was a guy named Phil who did a funny photo edit of a Sat 800 to show a built in microwave oven.  One of the reasons it was funny is the radio is large enough that you could almost believe it.

Interesting question....
The only local Icom dealer has the 756 PRO III @ Rand 22,230
That includes the 14% VAT tax and converts to US$3,700
He hasn't got any 756 PRO II's as he says they are discontinued and not available in South Africa anymore.

If I take up Universal's offer on a 756 PRO II and import one myself, then that would land me VAT & customs duty paid @ Rand 17,500 or US$2,920

It's expensive living in the Third World....!! (but I have other benefits)

But the facts can often make no sense at all without context, and what context the news organization provides is where most of the bias comes in.

One thing that's sneaked into the mix is that the US media is so damn lazy and goes to the Republican affiliated Washington DC think tanks for commentary to provide this context. Where on an overseas station, like Radio Aus. or Radio Netherlands, you'll hear a university professor, on American media you get the background from some guy from some outfit with "Enterprise" in the name, who is funded by a corporate grant and directed ideologically by the Republican party apparatus. Even if there is a more objective commentator, they often get paired in a "Cock Fight" with one of these mercenary propagandists. (A situation most professors aren't going to repeat).

You're clueless, a child dabbling in an adult's world. But in case you're a nice kid who's just lacking any knowledge of where your AOL keystrokes wander after they leave your playhouse, here is how it works:

Buying merchandise via eBay has its own set of rules and controls that must be followed before most state attorneys would agree to file a complaint. After remedies specified in the eBay contract (which both buyer and seller are bound to) have been exhausted, then a complaint is actionable with your local authority. A judgement could be issued in your small claims court against the party of your complaint. You then serve that judgement to a court of jurisdiction where the accused resides or does business. An attorney should represent you there if this is in a state other than your own. If your case is compelling to the court in the accused's court of jurisdiction, then that judgment from your court will be upheld and affirmed against the accused. When the accused later ignores this judgment that some out-of-stater (you) obtained against him, then you (your attorney) has to reappear in court, and obtain summary judgment, and file with the local sheriff to seize, hold and auction property to settle your claim. This will cost you much, much more than the portable radio you bought that arrived broke. So unless you can afford to really teach this offender a lesson, or the value of the damages you can claim are really significant, you lose. Nobody is protecting you from yourself in making deals over eBay with a known hatchet-case. You'll be the one that gets really famous if you ever organize a felony mail fraud or wire fraud over a silly eBay dispute. Leave it alone.

Wherever you end up putting the slinky antenna, make sure it's in a quiet place. If you walk around your house with a portable radio, you'll probably find a few spots with a lot of interference, many spots with considerable interference, and a few spots with only a little interference. It's in one of these latter spots that you want to hang your antenna. You might think I'm exaggerating, but just try it. When you're operating indoors, you're literally operating in the middle of a noise 'envelope' and it's important to minimize its effects.

I find it to be a nice portable shortwave radio, provided you get the Sony
AN-LP1 active antenna for it instead of using the whip.  I've never tried another antenna, so maybe a random wire would also help.
I am using it almost exclusively for MW, as it is an excellent MW receiver just by itself (never tried an external antenna; BTW, the AN-LP1 will not work at all on MW).
SW reception is good but I don't like the ergonomics, you might not have the same problem.  I am used to a tuning knob and larger controls.
FM is not bad, either.  I would recommend it for a good all-around radio.

Dear Cuhulin,

The Sony ICF-SW7600GR has the LW, MW (AM broadcast), FM (including the Japanese band), and SW (continuous to 30 MHz). In other words, it features complete coverage with no "gaps." It is, in my opinion, the finest small portable radio on the market. (I have three [3] of them as well as two [2] of its predecessor model the Sony ICF-SW7600G; the 'GR is better.)

MW (AM) reception is superb; a Select-A-Tenna can be used though, frankly, I have rarely found it to be necessary (note: I do rather little MW DXing). If you do wish to use a Select-A-Tenna (or the Terk equivalent) you would use that antenna only in close proximity to the receiver as the antenna connection is only for the SW frequencies. But, as I stated, I don't know that it is always necessary; others may comment differently on this subject.

There are many dealers which sell the radio; it is available from Universal Radio, from J&R Music World, from Amazon (their price varies, but is sometimes pretty good), but right now the best price I have seen is that of Bennett Brothers, Inc., a very reputable firm which is evidentally closing them out (Bennett is essentially a jewelry firm which sells many other products but cannot "feature" individual ones enough to make stocking them cost-effective I suppose). I received their close-out catalog a few days ago and noted the presence of this radio therein. When I checked their website, I couldn't find the radio, but you can call them toll-free at 1-800-621-2626 and ask for information. I shouldn't wait too long as I have posted the information on several sites (I have seen some posts stating that the writer had purchased one) and I don't know how many Bennett had. At $109.00 plus $9.00 shipping, that radio qualifies as a fantastic bargain. (Frankly, due to its outstanding performance for a portable, it qualifies as a bargain even at its full price of $170.00!)

[I didn't order the radio (even I can't justify buying another one of them!) though I did order some 2-line telephones which they are offering at a spectacular price. My order arrived in two days.]

You can't go wrong with the Sony ICF-SW7600GR!

All the best,

Joe

I like Stair, that much is true. I wouldn't fit into the setting there, at his farm. The first time I lit up a cigarette, or cranked up some Joe Satriani, they'd be beside themselves. Then, if some brother was hitting on my woman, I'd probably have to send him off to judgement. From a distance, I can appreciate the ministry of the "overcomer". Darren

I only have like 20 ft to work with for the extra wires. What do you suggest?  8 ft on one, 10 ft on the other??

BTW, you can have my ex wife. If I could get her deported to Germany for under $1000 I would do it.

Yes go to HRO or your local Icom dealer

They usually have deals on Saturdays. You have to write them and ask. I paidd $425 for mine after rebate and deal. I think they can be had for $410 now after rebates and deal. If also comes with free DSP. Try finding that on a brand new top notch reciever for $400....

The HF125 doesn't really have a front end as I recal (you had to buy it as an option) l, the 225 is a very good receiver (and the 225 even better), and far better than either RS 394 or 2001D/2010.

Well, I doubt he's pleading guilty - unless it's to a MUCH lesser charge.  (That could be the case as the courts seem to like to make all cases real cut and dry -- and easy on themselves!)

I also doubt he's going to willingly give up his control over the group. HE may be a bit delusional on the matter or his attorney has assured him that "it's in the bag" as far as a payoff is concerned.

You don't think Darren was attempting to pull the group's leg do you? That's the first thing I thought of.   I started to reply a good bit earlier and decided to wait and see who took his bait.

It seems to be way to quick and easy.  It takes DAYS - sometimes WEEKS - just to seat a jury in most high profile cases.  Unless all the plaintiffs have been bought or frightened off this case has not gotten started good.

Maybe God told him He's going to take him home so he won't have to meet Bubba!  ;-)

I hope you're not referring to their FOOD!  Nothing pretentious there.
Killer pot roast, fair prices.  And the pure maple syrup - a little pricey

The ICOM IC-703 Amateur Radio Transceiver.

The receiver is much better that shortwave radios in this price range and it uses about 400ma in receive mode.

Ham Radio Outlet has them on sale for $379.

Good Luck,

From the sound of things this morning, it appears as though he copped a plea. He said he pleaded guilty to a single charge, and that the rest were dismissed. Darren

If you want to buy yourself the ultimate DX radio and catch up with dxAce and get over 200 countries QSL'd then you better put one of these rigs in your Christmas stocking.

IcomAmerica are closing out the Icom IC-756 PRO II this Christmas for only $2150. Check it out at Universal and HRO.
The radio has an awesome digital receive section with full spectrum display using a 24 bit processor and a 32 bit DSP.
No new receive only radio's are coming out with specs such as this.
This rig will give you unparalleled opportunities for pulling in that really weak DX from the remotest weak stations.

NOTE if you listen to high quality AM audio only, then this rig is not for you - stick with your Drake R8B for the best audio sound .

an early HAPPY CHRISTMAS to you all

The only thing I ever bought at the Sharper Image was a little Sony digitally tuned AM/FM radio. This was around 1991 when digital tuning could only be found in stereo systems. The radio cost about $75, but I bought it because I thought I'd never see anything like it again. I was right, sort of-it disappeared from the market after about a year and it was a LONG time before I saw another portable digital tuned radio. It's about the size of a Degen and has five AM and five FM presets. I don't have it at hand so I don't know exactly what model it is but I think it's an ICF-M200.

As for the radio that's the subject of this thread, it's a Kchibo KK-C300. See Passport 2005 page 107. That review says it's priced at $39.95. For just $10 or so more you can buy a Degen over Ebay that has much better quality. Either the DE1102 or the DE1103 is fine, I prefer the 1102 but you may find that the 1103 works better for your location. The 1103 is kinda quirky but it has just as good performance as the 1102.

Regarding Martyn, I stumbled accross this excuse he made about his expulsion from e-bay this summer.

The reason for my suspension is that I listed a Galaxy transceiver , 26 to 28.3 MHz  they removed it as it covered CB and Ham, then I re listed it without mentioning the frequency coverage and they removed it again and explained to me why and I said I now understand, they said that although it was enough to suspend me that they would not and hey presto, 2 days later, on a Sunday evening an hour before 101 items were about to finish ($19,000) they removed all of my items and suspended me and have not even had the courtesy to contact me despite many e-mails to them. So shit out of luck here for a while I guess,,, well at least the garden looks nice now.

Wal-Mart is probably the number one pusher of the RFID chip. Gillette was supposedly putting them in every package of razor blades and Michelin also was supposedly putting them in every tire many months ago. If this is true soon they may not need street light cameras. They can have RFID readers in the pavement and just compare the time of your entering the intersection with the time the light changed. Also, they can send out speeding tickets by marking the time your set of tires entered a freeway ramp and computing the speed by when you exit another ramp. All these RFID chips will have unique codes and may be traced back to you via your checking account or the card with which you paid for it!

These are links to where you can listen on the web to some DX programs.
Might also have some info there about when they broadcast over the air, but I usually download these so I can listen to them as MP3s when stuck in traffic on the daily commute....

The Icom R2 does receive shortwave ....... with a caveat or two:  it is a fixed and wide bandwidth, have never received shortwave with the stock duck.  That being said, if you want a scanner and ability to listen to the major broadcasters this fits the bill; have used mine mobile with a 19" whip antenna and have heard BBC, Radio Australia, DW
- when they broadcast to the US, Radio China Intnl & a few others.  If you have about 30' of wire wrap about 10-15 turns on the duck then string out the rest and you're set.  However, don't expect anything more than the handful of major broadcasters.

I've heard that the Yaesu is much more sensitive on shortwave though; both in this thread and in previous threads on this topic.  I'd say if it's a passing interest then go with the R5 (R2 replacement) due to cost/benefit: if you plan on regular use and demand more reasonable shortwave then look at the Yaesu and perhaps the Yupiteru.

I was surprised by Stair for three reasons: One, I kept running into him all the time on the dial, always getting great reception, even though he sounds like he is off the deep in.  Two, I didnt know he was on trial at all. Three, when he gave his station address I was shocked and embarrassed to find him from my home state of South Carolina. I have known a couple guys from Walterboro though, and they were just as mental a Stair. May God have mercy on the place....

Are you confusing a poor operating ham as a pirate shortwave broadcaster? I've been listening to 3965 kHz for a couple hours, now, and have only heard some dimwits back east (NA) jabbering about trivial matters. It's not too hard to find lunatics on the ham bands transmitting all kinds of illegal stuff. Try to tune into 3840 kHz sometimes late in your evenings/night and listen for the wacko named Steve Wingate, KG6TXH. He does everything you've mentioned almost on a nightly basis running 1500 watts into a fairly good size antenna. He's the latest edition of idiot-ham to appear on that frequency. I've received many emails regarding FCC actions that are supposedly in the works against him by R.Hollingsworth.

Time is a very relative thing Mike : ) Try this sometime, ask 3 people what time it is and you'll get 2 different answers and if you as some screwball of a ham or a short-wave listener he'll rattle off why UTC or GMT is better. (of course the average person would think such a person is "off the rails" already I guess - grin)

Oh well, that's was 02.05 UTC time on 3.210
MHz or 3.210 Mc for you older radio purists out there.  You know how it is Mike.
we 'merkins think the world revolves around us because we elected a chimpanzee back to a

Nixon in '72.

I used the word 'rarely' for a reason. I have never had an original waxed paper capacitor explode in any of my boatanchors during the past 30-years. That doesn't mean it never happens. I usually replace them because most are leaky, especially the infamous 'black beauties'.

Has Yupiteru installed a computer port on their high end scanners yet? I preferred the Yupiteru to the 8200 for reception, but the 8200 had the port. I wound up getting neither.

Right, but they also state that all of those things were surface items recently deposited on the site. They weren't claiming that they were left there by the inhabitants. Did you catch the bit about the "concentrations of zinc and copper"? That one really caught me off guard! I'm usre that they didn't mean for it to be as funny as I found it. <g>

I'm missing your point. They didn't find anything diagnostic...that's all.
Absence of evidence isn't evidence of absence, as they say. And they do note that more sampling and collection of baseline data is needed. Seems to be the proper stance to me.

That's a possibility. It sounds like the jury is still out; I can wait for the verdict, albeit a bit impatiently.

By the way, thanks again for that link. It was a neat one. I loved those pictures! I didn't expect them, and was quite pleasantly surprised to find them. But am I the only guy around that loathes pdf's?

I keep getting "cannot find server" error messages when I try to navigate from that page. I'll continue with my attempts, though. That looks like interesting reading.

Nuts. Those are pay sites. :( I'm not about to give them $15 regardless of

It's a rare beast, more's the pity. Anyway, that's the flood that the original poster was referring to. Whether it happened or not is a different matter. My mind's made up on the Noachin one, though. ;)

Um, wrong. If the courts rule it is illegal, then by definition it is illegal. An example of how a court can legally make a law.

 Who says it is illegal? fed govt!? fed govt

Yea and the sad part is. Most of these fixes to appliances are cheap to do

I'm certainly rethinking my vacation destination!!

CANCUN, Mexico - Police in Playa de Carmen, just south of the Caribbean resort of Cancun, reported finding a suspect passed out next to the sliced-up remains of his companion, a man whose heart he had allegedly carved out and set to cook on a stove.

The corpse was discovered Tuesday in a hut where the victim had been hung up to allow the blood to drain out of his body, according to Luis Herrera May, head of police investigations in Playa de Carmen, about 36 miles south of Cancun.

Actually, WWV is about to become even more listenable.
A preview on the new format can heard by going to Classic.

Count on your kind of fool to exaggerate and miscomprehend completely anything of value ever told to you.

One: Kids who are loved WANT to go to school.
Two: Rescue is permitted IF you apologize for it.
Three: Actual freedom is never misinformed. The nature of freedom is that of informing.

You're trying to extract neurotic delinquents raised by idiots like you and insert them into my recommendations.

That would be about as stupid as expecting you to grasp anything you haven't thought of yet.

Still, as A.S. Neill showed by his life's work, such neurotic children as you produce can be reversed simply by the method of honoring what are their, at first, warped and non-productive motivations. It simply takes a while for them to realize they are no longer being abused.

Disingenuous.
No one is institutionalized merely because you don't like their language.

Nope, sorry. I was born 14 March 1950 at 1:33PM in Quincy, Adams County, Illinois. Check with the Clerk of the Country Recorder's Office.

Even squirrels do it.

Nope, I just keep my other professional writing separated and strictly under my nom de plum. I have another pseudonym for my electronic

You can be sure of that, and you can persist in your pop-delusions about what actual professional writers do.

Nonsense, just knowledge and experience. You continue to re-delude

I tell you what I believe abuse is, and then I note who says they do

I am not sure why Lowbander DX-394's sell like hotcakes for $250 plus shipping when for a few $$$ more they can get some real outstanding receivers from other manufacturers. a used satellit 800 is $320 from universal when they have them in stock and it is a much better receiver with a warranty !

he includes some wire and a clip for an antenna and also a junk box speaker but still ????????

what do people see ? are they that taken in by his BS writeup of how his mods walk on water...he makes a big deal out some BB's in the tuning knob !!!!!!

clue me in people,,,,,do I want one of these ????? is it better than an R-8B ?????

What a devastating judgement for the Government. This passage by Lord Hoffman sums up the essence:

"I said that the power of detention is at present confined to foreigners and I would not like to give the impression that all that was necessary was to extend the power to United Kingdom citizens as well. In my opinion, such a power in any form is not compatible with our constitution. The real threat to the life of the nation, in the sense of a people living in accordance with its traditional laws and political values, comes not from terrorism but from laws such as these. That is the true measure of what terrorism may achieve. It is for Parliament to decide whether to give the terrorists such a victory."

And quoting Lord Devlin many years earlier:

"The first object of any tyrant in Whitehall would be to make Parliament utterly subservient to his will; and the next to overthrow or diminish trial by jury... [It] is more than an instrument of justice and more than one wheel of the constitution: it is the lamp that shows that freedom lives."

We now have a Parliament that does whatever the ruling political party wants, and a Government planning to limit trial by jury...

Yeah.  After the midterms, all the LIEberals will be lined up and shot.
Then we'll nuke all our enemies - the Chinese, the English, the MEXICO CITY, Dec 15 (Reuters) - A Mexican man killed his lover in a drunken, drugged fight then cooked the man's body in tomato and onion sauce and ate it over three days.

Police found Gumaro de Dios Arias grilling rotting human flesh for his breakfast, including part of a heart, when they raided a shack he lived in near the Caribbean beach resort of Playa del Carmen, a police chief said on Wednesday.

"He was preparing stews. There was a grill where he was cooking part of the heart and bits he had cut off the body. It was terrible, terrible," said local police chief Martin Estrada, who was among a dozen police who raided the shack.

No, courts can't do that.  If a court finds that something is illegal, then it is finding that someone broke a law, it is not making a law.

Not true at all. Take a basic college political science class. You are talking about statutory law. Our constitution and many laws are very loosely written in order to stay relavent. It is the job of the courts to take that framework and interperet what is legal and illegal. This is called common law. Once a ruling is made, stare decisis requires other courts to apply this ruling to any similar cases.

I feel like apologizing right off the bat since I know this question must be asked regularly in this group.  I've searched the older posts but still had questions.

I work in CT, about two hours from both NY and Boston.  I'm on the lower floor and get mediocre AM/FM reception in my office from my run of the mill boom box on my desk.  I was looking for a replacement radio and in the course of doing a search online found listings for WB radios.  The idea of being able to receive not only the CBC news (being an refugee Canadian) but also getting the BBC and other news sources intrigued me.  That of course left me with more questions than answers.

What I'm looking for is a decent radio I can keep in my office.  I don't travel much so it probably won't move from its spot on my desk. I'd like to keep the price below $200 if possible. I'm not sure what I can expect to hear.  Might I be able to pull in stations from Europe with a radio in that price range or will I be limited to those that are getting some form of enhanced reception on the eastern US seaboard?  Since I'll be at work I won't be spending much time fiddling with dials to pull in too many really esoteric stations, but getting news directly from the Middle East or Japan on my desktop would be amazing.

From the research I've done I looked at the Sony 2010 (a used one, although most of the ones on Ebay appear to be pretty old models, very low serial numbers).  I also saw good reviews for the Grundig YB 400PE, which I can pick up new for less than the used 2010.  Any other suggestions?  Also, if reception turned out to be poor, would I most likely have to run some sort of wire attenna along my wall to my window for better reception?

Thanks in advance for any information.  If I get responses fast enough maybe I can sneak this in as a late Christmas request.  heh heh...

You'd think people would realize--if it needs 11 mods, maybe something sucks about it to start.

I was looking at one of those, until I saw the 1/5 rating on DXing.com

I have a Sony Wega 20" in the room adjacent to the computer/radio room. The interference generated by this tv being turned on (my wife watches it all the time, unfortunately) is mind boggling, especially on the 41 and 31meter bands (7 & 9 mhz on my Icom R71A receiver and longwire antenna. What exactly did you mean when you said you installed a "powerstrip" behind the tv? The Sony 20" tv is plugged into a hefty surge protector. Plugging into the wall outlet directly vs into the surge protector outlet strip does not affect the massive amount of rfi it generates on the aforementioned bands (wipes them out completely). Any suggestions? Please define what you mean by "powerstrip behind the tv." Any help would be much appreciated. Thanks.

You sure that it is the switching power supply and not the high voltage circuits?  I have a Philips 107T5 (17") that gives interference around 1500 khz and not around 700 khz.  I am running in 1024x768 at 85 hz, and if I change to 75 hz, for example, the interference (a high pitched whine) moves.  The radio is about 4 feet from the monitor.  Over 10 feet there is no interference at all.

Well, I'm not the most knowledgeable person in this group, but I may be able to offer some help.

The mediocre AM/FM respetion is almost certainly due to the fact that you are in a steel frame building - no?  That murders radio reception sometimes (most of the time, in fact).

The BBC would be no problem, if the type of radio you were looking for was in your own home.  CBC news is tougher - none of the few Canadian SW outlets are terribly strong.  Fine sometimes, weak or almost nonexistent others.  And I'm in a wood frame building in Michigan with a longwire antenna hooked to a very sensitive receiver!

With any of the radios you mention below, when reception conditions are good, you can occasionally do all of the things you hope for.  But again - in that steel frame building . . .

See above comment.

Both are good radios in your price range, and might well give you the results you are looking for on a whip antenna when you are at home.
But in a steel frame building, I doubt it.

Remember, others here may have more hopeful info for you - keep checking this thread.  And god luck to you, jwilliam.

RS,

I feel that Canadians should be focusing on Building a Better Canada and criticizing Canada's shortcomings.

But, MII like a few 'other' posters who claim to be Canadians, seem to be focused on being a constant critic of the USofA.

As to your statement: "I'm a nosy piece of shit."
This may be a 'personal' assessment of yourself
- but I do not know you well enough to make that statement.

Hi all

I know many listeners will have heard the various numbers stations and similar stations on the short wave bands from time to time.

I have looked around the Internet and noted that the sources of these transmissiosn are generaly attributed to overseas countries.

However Australia, like other countries has its own secret services. Have Australian short wave listeners heard numbers transmissions which have been strong enough to have been attributed to an Australia source? Ie is there a sort of numbers Radio G'day out there?

If so it would be an interesting exercise to get some beam headings and see where the transmissions are coming from. A sort of mega foxhunt.

cheers Peter

Well, I've certainly been put in my place!  Next time my child wants to stay home from school for a month to watch the tube, play in the street during rush hour or shoot dope, I will just let him do it, because that's what friends are for, and parents should never interfere with their childrens' freedom, no matter how ill-informed it may be!

Seems sensible to me.  The moral values thing struck me as being an invention of the media (like so many things).  I know lots of people who voted both ways, and few of them voted on the basis of whether one would better represent the religious/ethical of the voter.  In many ways we Yanks are a very tolerant society, not so much in others.

Personally, I voted for who I thought would do the best job overall for me, which I consider (for lack of a better example) to be roughly mainstream.  It doesn't really pay to vote a candidate on a single issue, when we are daily affected by so many issues both tangible and ethereal.  With candidates so seemingly polarized, it is difficult to choose, since neither represents very well.

Maybe they are doing just that now - or maybe they're going FM.

It doen't take a great capital outlay or a ton of time to set up a new SW station capable of serving so small a nation.  A slightly (or not) modified ham rig and a decent set of wires would do it.

Hmmmm....... given what I've seen, NO WHERE does it suggest he has any formal expertise in child rearing/parenting.
I'd suggest this dude has been sniffing the solder fumes a bit too much.
Steve ole boy - get yourself an exhaust fan. The lead is starting to get to you.

While he doesn't proclaim expertise on Parenting on that website, he does seem to lay claims to his own brand of experience in sexual acts. Since he said he would allow his teens to have sex in the next room, I have to wonder if he joined in with his in teaching them? If not to teach or join, to watch and/or film? Some sick thoughts indeed, but hey, that is the avenue he led us down. He has created more questions than he answered. Given what we've seen this far, I have to wonder if he can even do the sexual acts right!
Actually, I think he's a pud pounder. Too much time on his hands and LOTS of wishful thinking.

I was "expecting" to see a website regarding Child rearing or something to which he has claimed vast knowledge and professionalism of. I didn't see that. Therefore I must come away with the thoughts that he is a phony. Any PROFESSIONAL - worth a grain of salt would have a website up or some link to his works. NOT divulging his works - shows a shadow of a doubt. HE is the one who made all the claims to be a writer of the topics which were being discussed, therefore it is HE who should back his statements. We are waiting, and we shall keep on waiting - because it can not and will not ever happen. You know, when the state goes to prosecute someone they've accused of a crime, they must present the evidence. THIS man has made accusations of people he doesn't even know - of them being child abusers, etc. THIS man claims to be someone of stature and professionalism. Since HE is the one making all the "accusations" and claims, it is HE who needs to put forth the proof - not us. It is HIS move - to PROVE without a doubt that those he calls child abusers - are child abusers. I say PUT UP OR SHUT UP. With the way he accuses wildly and lays false claims, someday - he'll be in court for slander/libel and/or defamation of character - or perhaps even a nut house. Stating kids should have bombs, the last choice seems to fit the best. The sooner the better.

DM

Shutting down GPS would create a lot of chaos.  Do airplanes not come

Bush got a lot of people to the polls by threatening them with gay marriage.  He got them to vote against their best interests by exploiting their fear of the unknown.  In the light of day, that's not too terribly moral.

Not sure about the gay marriage thing - but I agree with the accusation of demagoguery.  At that, Bush is a master (or at least, a damn good puppet).

The Bush corporate cronies don't make any money selling any ANTI box cutter systems to the Feds. They make money by selling them expensive stuff like anti missile systems. The corporate/government corruption matrix is SO intertwined now that it's almost impossible to get out of it.

Check out the recent Boeing corruption scandal, with government reps standing to gain immensely from all the contracts being awarded to the contractor. If terrorism didn't exist, Business would have to invent it. It's just plain Good For Business.

'Rogue States'...good grief!

With a GPS, you don't need to know much about navigation - you can go to your target, tell it to remember that spot, and then the GPS will give you an arrow pointing back to that spot from wherever you are so you can get back there.
(handy for finding a favorite fishing hole, or for not getting lost in the woods)

I'm not an expert on aircraft navigation, but I imagine fifteen or twenty minutes of life without a functional GPS would cause less chaos than having a jet smack into a crowded building.

Ask M II, he's an expert on most anything. He is, after all, Canadian.

He's worse than a 'rogue state', he's a rogue 'tard boy, much like that David fellow.

Both of them need to spend less time with the 'puter, and more time out in the great outdoors toting their portables.

A licensed pilot will not have a major problem if the GPS is turned off... they are required to be able to navigate without it. A half trained terrorist on the other hand may have to rely on the GPS technology instead of the other, more difficult to master navigation methods.

Well, it's been a long time coming, but the mystery is solved, and can you believe in the end it was just a TV. I think someone even suggested it may be a television, and I nearly disregarded the idea for it's simplicity.
Well, it looks like I can finally get back to enjoying my radio as I haven't in a good while. Thank you to everybody for your help and suggestions. 73, and now for some good dx.

World Music Radio (WMR) is now running full 10 kW on 5815 kHz (till 21 UTC tonight) and again tomorrow Friday when we'll be on the air 07-21 UTC with 10 kW. Then back to 5 kW for the rest of the weekend until Monday morning at 07 UTC.

Finally the connection from the studio to the transmitter site has been fixed and we're now hoping to be on the air without any breaks in the audio.

No, you're not.  No 54-year-old parent, at least one that's not institutionalized, would use the language that you do.  You're a 19-year-old failing college student.

A good question, and I would add specifically, could it be solved simply turning off the TV, did you have to unplug it, or did you use RFI filters or chokes?

Most newer TVs use switching power supplies and some generate bad RFI when just plugged in, they don't need to be switched on. Another source is PC CRT monitors. Same kind of power supply and same kind of RFI. I have a 17 inch Cybervision on PC #2 in the basement and it generates enough RFI hash to render much of the AM broadcast band useless when it's plugged in.

Well, as to eliminating the problem, I just unplugged the thing. I suppose I'll just plug it in whenever we want to use it We generally don't watch much tv and rarely use this particular one anyway. For some reason, it was causing some buzzing about every 130 or so kHz. I'm not really sure why, but the tv was kind of an old one, and not a very decent one to start with. This morning I set the radio on a frequency where the noise was present and turned the gain up so I could hear the radio as I walked around the house. I unplugged just about everything in the house, unfortunately I didn't start with this particular room, and when I pulled the plug on that set the noise vanished. That's pretty much it.

Where do you figure that?  I know plenty of people with more then 2 kids that use language exactly like that.. now 1/2 of them I know would smack a kid upside the head for using that same language and wonder where they picked it up but Steve does not seem like one of them.. While I don't agree with everything he says I don't take him for a liar..

So was it off when it was plugged in?? My problem only kicks in when the crt gets energized, and chokes don't help it. (I just wait until the wife goes to bed to do some serious listening.)

Our large (ish) screen TV wipes out everything from longwave to about 25.200 MHz. I devised a brilliant workaround by installing a powerstrip behind the TV, to enjoy blessed silence. Other appliances I've known and hated (for the RFI they generate): Microwaves (even when not cooking), VCRs (Horrible hash-generators), thermostats, battery chargers, and almost every PC printer I've ever owned. I think Part 15 should be better - enforced.

Congratulations, though, on your new - found freedom from the noise beast!

Yeah, the tv was off, but just being plugged in was causing the noise. I'm just glad it turned out to be something that I can unplug and not some huge issue. I do notice now that when my central heat comes on, it makes a bit of noise around six mhz, probably because my antenna is just in the vicinity of the unit. Aside from that all is quiet as it should be.

Virtually every plane still has VOR, and will for some time. GPS is still not 100% dependable, and there are restrictions as to when it can be used.

Certain gov't agencies have jammed gps frequencies for years for one reason or another. There is also a protocol for falsifying the time transmission.
Using this method, you can take a North Korean missle and turn it around to make it hit its home country by making it think it is somewhere that it really is not.

Thanks Steve. This has really made my day. I even had to message my girlfriend at work to tell her about it, which is kind of dumb because she doesn't really care, but she's happy if I am. I can't believe that I overlooked such a simple thing this whole time. Maybe now I can catch some of that dx Steve L. is hearing. He may suggest otherwise, unless of course I'm planning on picking up an R8 sometime soon. : ) 73

>Kids go with the wrong crowd to aggravate abusive parents, >and for no other reason.

I kept my keyboard shut until now.
I can think of at least a dozen examples in my own life, as a parent and friend/family of other parents, where the above claim is simply unsupportable.
In fact, laughably naive and ignorant, more accurately.
It beggars the imagination that there exists someone who pretends to know what's best in parenting yet ascribes to the sorts of stupidity exhibited here.
Steve, you're an angry, abusive, foul-mouthed screamer. You have NO leg to stand on where anything required of being a decent person (let alone raising a child)) is concerned. You have no credibility, no self-control, no sense of decency. All you do is blather and yelp, drool and gnash, curse and exclaim, and dig a deeper hole for your type of mentality.
You're one of the single most immature, ill-equipped, emotionally underdeveloped people it has ever been my misfortune to have paraded in front of me.

Your anger, your vitriol, are breathtaking.
"Cumwad", "shithead" (multiple times), "sorry piece of shit", really impressive from a 54-year-old parent.
How incredibly ironic... this foul-mouthed raver crying 'foul!' at 'abuse, evil', etc., and then filling every single post with abusive evil.
Someone hurt you a long time ago, in some deep way, and you're still hurting over it. Big time. Deny it, don't deny it, I'm not concerned. You are acting VERY MUCH like an adult victim of childhood abuse or abduction, or something related to the issue about which you are so ravenously irrational.
Either that or you're simply a jerk.
Yep, there are a lot of bad parents in the world.
I've just finished bothering with one of them.
G.P.

I found out a while ago that most people are extremely dumb. Yes, the vast majority of the people are easily taken advantage of. Many people like us feel most other people are just as astute as we are. And yes, many are way smarter then us.

But in my readings and seeing things go down in this world, I'm totally amazed at what I see.
In fact, you read about well known people get taken for millions. Here is another example of people who are just plain, well....morons.

I mean how hard is it to go to the company's website and at least try to compare prices on the net? How about free shipping? How do I get it?  I see CPU's selling for much more then on most of the well known vendors on the net.

I know one thing. People were sure a lot smarter even 10 years ago. As our public schools keep sending out illiterates in this world, who can't get a 40 grade on a test {yes 40 is passing for it where 65 was passing for us way back} and they get to take it 5 times too. These are our future medical technicans, FBI etc.

These kids are our future morons. And this is what the gov't wants. An elite class that goes to the best schools and get the best education, while the rest of our society are the servant class.

The Gilded Age has returned.  In fact, this PR for fat cats even uses the world ''gild''.  This country was started by rabble-rousers who hated the idle rich and old money.  Georhe Bush wants to reverse the American Revolution and return this country to the British East India Company's heirs.

''D.C. hotels gild inauguration with deals up to $1 million

By BOB DART
The Atlanta Journal-Constitution
Published on: 12/09/04

WASHINGTON � Polish that Rolls. Chill the champagne. Deck out in diamonds and furs.

High-rolling political revelers are coming to celebrate President Bush's second inauguration next month, and hotels are ready.

Consider the Mandarin Oriental's Presidential Privilege package Jan. 17-21. A private jet will ferry a couple from anywhere in the continental United States to the 3,500-square-foot Presidential Suite, which has 14 rooms, including a gym, a kitchen, a game room with leather walls and a parlor with 25-foot ceilings, and of course its own butler.

Mandarin Oriental Hotel
The Mandarin Oriental Hotel's Presidential Suite has a view of the Jefferson Memorial.

Mandarin Oriental Hotel
The Mandarin Oriental Hotel is offering a $200,500 Presidential Privilege package in which a private jet will ferry a couple from anywhere in the continental United States to the capital.

To get around, the couple will have a choice of a Hummer, Maybach or Rolls Royce, with a chauffeur on call 24 hours a day.

There are tickets to "an inaugural event," but don't bother packing. The package includes a wardrobe from Neiman Marcus � Oscar de la Renta evening gown and matching Manolo Blahnik shoes, Judith Leiber handbag, emerald ring and full-length mink coat for the lady, and a Kiton tuxedo, Burberry reversible coat, 18- carat gold Cartier watch and jeweled cuff links for the gentleman.

The couple will host a private, five-course dinner party for eight guests prepared by the hotel chef and sommelier. Every evening, they will be served Krug champagne and Beluga caviar in the suite while they enjoy a panoramic city view.

The cost is $200,500 � not including tax and tips.

If you'd rather go upscale, though, there's the $1 million inauguration package at the Jefferson Hotel, four blocks from the White House.

What inspires such excesses of luxury? Inaugurations traditionally provide the biggest boost to the capital's hospitality industry.

"There will be some times during the year when we have more people in the city � the Fourth of July, for instance � but for sheer impact in hotels, retailing, restaurants and transportation, this is our No. 1 event," said Bill Hanbury, president of the district's Convention and Tourism Corp. "It brings in $50 million plus."

That generates luxury hotel packages costing tens of thousands of dollars, many with presidential themes.

The $1 million Jefferson Hotel package, in addition to most of the Mandarin Oriental's features, includes his and hers gold Presidential Rolex watches with diamond dials (hers comes on a diamond bracelet) with a private fitting in the hotel's Presidential Suite. The couple will pick out their ballroom garb from Saks, and the lady gets a matching diamond necklace, earrings and bracelet set from Tiffany's.

The guests get a private tour of the exhibit "Jacqueline Kennedy: The White House Years." This entails a second jaunt by private jet, because the exhibition is in Chicago.

There the guests will spend one night in a suite at the House of Blues, eat a dinner for two inspired by JFK's inaugural dinner and splurge at a private shopping spree at Marshall Field's.

Or consider these deals, at $150,000 or less:

� The Fairmont Hotel wants its guests to experience being "president for a day" and "first lady for a day," so its package includes two actors portraying Secret Service agents. In their Presidential Suite, the couple will host a "state reception" for 10 people, who will sip Dom Perignon champagne and eat Beluga caviar. The cost is $10,000 per night, with a four-night minimum.

� The Sofitel Hotel on Lafayette Square across from the White House will fill its Presidential Suite with fresh yellow roses for four days for its $75,000 Don't Mess With Texas package. Upon check-in, the guest couple will have vodka martinis flavored with habanero peppers and Texas beef carpaccio served in their suite. There's a keepsake honoring the Lone Star State's favorite son every day � sterling silver spurs engraved with the inaugural logo, eight four-piece place settings of official White House china, and his and hers Tony Lama snakeskin cowboy boots and gold Cartier watches with an inauguration inscription.

� For $100,000, the Four Seasons is offering a Whistle Stop Tour aboard Amtrak's high- speed Acela, which runs from Boston to Washington, with stops in New York and Philadelphia. Guests get limo tours and luxurious treatment in stays at Four Seasons hotels in all four cities.

� With the Ritz-Carlton's $150,000 Presidential Package 2005, you'll get personal service a president might envy. In a nice touch, a butler will fly to the guests' home to pack for the trip � in an included $20,000 set of Louis Vuitton luggage. The butler will remain on call around the clock in Washington, along with a chauffeur and personal massage therapist. Parts of the package serve a full four-year term: two weekend stays at the Ritz-Carlton every year until the 2009 inauguration, and a Hermes scarf for the lady and Hermes tie for the gentleman every month until the next president is sworn into office.

If you have a South facing window you may want to consider an XM boombox. Flawless reception, including the BBC World Service 24/7.

I'll do better than that -- how 'bout law school and 16 years of practicing law? Your original statement was, "If the courts rule it is illegal, then by definition it is illegal." That's wrong. Courts don't have freedom to make law, they interpret areas that specific laws don't explicitly cover, and those interpretations become binding precedent if they are decided by the highest court in that jurisdiction. In the case that started this whole thread, the court did not find any activity to be illegal, it simply applied the Fourth Amendment and the exclusionary rule that developed in case law to enforce the Fourth Amendment. It did not determine for the first time that anything was illegal.

All this shrieking about eavesdropping on your kids being illegal seems to be based on the comments of the kid's lawyer, and not upon what the court actually ruled. Washington law requires the consent of all parties to a telephone conversation to consent to its recording, apparently (many states only require the consent of one party). It's not illegal to eavesdrop, but any evidence that obtained in violation of the Fourth Amendment cannot be used to prosecute you criminally.

According to the old ENIGMA group the CIA station "Cynthia" used a tx site in Oz when it was operational. See:

I have a Grundig YB400 for BCB and shortwave listening while away from home.

I have seen claims that the Superadio I is an extraordinary BCB receiver.  Is the difference between the performance of the YB400 and the Superadio I significant enough to justify lugging a second radio?

Interesting that Tivoli has done a radio with digital tuning though.

I like the vernier dial on my Tivoli PAL, but unfortunately, the IF filters are wide enough that if you have a strong signal on each side of the one you want, the radio skips from one strong signal to the next.  Its' vernier is more of a look and feel thing than a useful feature.

The audio is beautiful, but it's not a radio I'd use for challenging signals.

I've got experience with radios in office buildings, so I'll be sending a reply about suitable radios and antennas in a couple hours.

I'm thinking about buying an SW7600GR to replace both my DX440 and DX398.

I originally bought the 398 as a replacement for the 440, but when it came to beacons, it's performance was disappointing.

So, to avoid that same experience again, I defer to you, the readers of this group:

Is this a good rig for beacons/CW?

Everything else about this radio looks good to me.

Many thanks and much respect,

Charlie Chan

I've been listening to this frequency since about 1450 and was curious as to it's origin. They id'd as BBC radio 4, but I can't find any information verifying it as a bbc frequency. Could it be another station broadcasting bbc material? Just curious, thanks.

Thanks for your reply.  Actually, I may have overstated the poor quality of AM/FM reception in my office.  I can get WFAN pretty clearly, ESPN comes in faint and with static, which probably speaks more to the relative strength of their signal than to any issues with reception.  I've also added the Sony 7600GR to my list of possibilities after reading some more reviews.

If you're getting mediocre performance in your office from a boom box at this time, you'll probably be getting the same type reception even from an upscale receiver. The problem is you need to get the antenna outside of the building in order for either radio to receive better.
Having said that -- it's still fun (and necessary) to try. I've tried several radios in my office/building enviroment and settled on the Sony 7600GR. I especially like the 7600GR because it has sync detect capabilities and I've found just this alone will bypass 80% of any whines from office equipments, at least in my enviroment. Understand though: there is an endless debate as to performance of three radios....YB400, Sangean 909/DX398, and the 7600GR. All three are great "portables" -- and it depends on your personal preferences and needs as to which is the best. Regardless, you WON'T go wrong with any of these 3, including the 7600GR. If you check around (and from other posters on this board), a 7600GR can be had for about 130 dollars. A GREAT price!
(Normally sells for about 170 dollars or so). It does NOT come with an AC adaptor. The Sony 2010 is a great radio of course, but in my case, I've found it a bit large for work use -- just my opinion.

As for receiving the CBC and shortwave in general in an office enviroment during day hours; well maybe not much luck, but there are many foreign relays via Canadian transmitters that you should have no problem receiving in an office. I'm in northern Ohio and they come in like local at work with the whip simply extended. (I work nights by the way). Right now, while typing this at home, I'm listening to Radio Austria on 13675 which is relayed through Canada. You "should" be able to pick this station up during the day hours while at work. As for Canadian broadcasts, you still have Radio Canada Internationl, and there's also a neat little frequency during the day hours, 6.070 that is a simulcast of CFRB and you have a good opportunity of picking that up during day hours in an office.

Well, too much said already. My recommendation would be to try the Sony 7600GR, especially if you shop around a little and get that 130 dollar price. A very good deal and you won't be disappointed. Let us know if you get any SW radio. Good luck!!

| Yea and the sad part is. Most of these fixes to appliances are cheap to do
| when they're being built. A simple cap, bulun, sheilding etc.

Precisely.  A handful of ferrite beads, plus conductive silver spray, has allowed me to eliminate 95% of the RFI from my immediate listening environment.  I think the electronics manufacturers are engaged in a race to the bottom, in terms of engineering quality of their collective product.

One of the bright spots on the RFI horizon was the gift of an LCD monitor from my brother in law (wedding present) a couple of years ago.  Glass CRTs are fast becoming unavailable, and that is one "solid-state" trend I heartily support.

Well, Dick, it's basically an extension - cord - box thingy with an "on/off" switch.
Sadly, I don't want to climb into the back of the TV because it's still under warranty.

I can definitely commiserate with you, though, because my experience is very similar to yours.  I found that building and installing a rotatable coax loop did wonders to eliminate the noise, due to the fact that the loop allows me to "null" the noise.  I was considering getting an MFJ antenna "noise canceller," but after building the loop,
I decided that would be a waste of time.

According to Primtetimeshortwave.com, Voice of Africa should have been broadcasting in English this morning from 1600-1700 on 15220 and 17840 khz. However, while Voice of Africa (or what I believe to be Voice of Africa) was using these frequencies, the broadcast was not in English.

I heard an English language broadcast from Voice of Africa not long ago, but the schedules I consult never seem to be correct. Very frustrating.

I don't lie to my child.  Ever.  About anything.

You are the most abusive and arrogant "enlightened" person I have ever read.  You are the kind of person that gives good liberals a bad name...regardless of whether you are a liberal or not.  Further, you do not have experience of a broad enough nature to make believe that you are the last word on child-rearing, nor is any other wacko psychological / psychiatric type (in my experience, which includes some numbers of these people, they need their own help more than anyone else, and are generally out-to-lunch).  You know nothing and feign wisdom - and it doesn't work.

The computer was still completely usable, but seeing those dead spots started to really bother me. A CRT will either work or not work, plus the colour rendition in Corel Draw and Photoshop is still superior to the LCD. That's  important to a lot of people

I like the smaller depth of the LCD screen and the much lower power consumption, but I'll be waiting for a year or two yet before committing.

Well, if you're handy, conductive spray paint and ferrite beads can be enormously helpful - are you experiencing RFI from the CRT?

An R75.  After the bbc programming it switched to a Republic Broadcasting Network program. The only thing I came up with for that time and frequency was AIR, but I'm not sure about the programming.

No idea... I'd say you have some kind of image problem with the receiver. The Republic Broadcasting Network is on shortwave, however, not on that frequency to the best of my knowledge.

You are fighting at least two problems:  Noise and trying to get a signal through a steel framed building.  If you have a window office, then try what I did with a 2010.  Place the radio as close to the window as possible to get away from pc and flourescent light noise. Run a thin wire around the perimeter of the window, held in place with suctioncup cupholders.  Magnet wire works great and is virtually invisible.

You should have similar results with a YB400PE or one of the Degen or Kaito 1103 radios.

Chairman of the RSGB Spectrum Forum, Colin Thomas, G3PSM, reports that Denmark has published a plan to allow amateur radio in the band 7100 - 7200kHz from 1 January 2005.

The Polish regulatory authority has agreed that the band 7100-7200 kHz is to become available to Polish amateurs on a secondary basis, effective with the date of bringing into force the new National Frequency Allocation Table, the publication of which is expected in January.

Other countries where IARU member societies have approached their authorities for early access to the extended band include Belgium, the Czech Republic and the Netherlands.

On 19 December, it is exactly 100 years since the Dutch Coastal Station PCH, Scheveningen Radio, was founded. The station closed on 31 December 1998, but on 18 and 19 December the 100th anniversary is being commemorated with special event station PC100H. Look for the station on all HF bands from 160 to 10 metres CW and SSB, except 10MHz, which will use CW and RTTY or PSK31. An operating schedule will be published on the Internet. Further information can be obtained from Hans, PA1HR, by e-mail: hans@remeeus.nl

Congratulations to the American CQ Amateur Radio magazine http://www.cq-amateur-radio.com/ , which celebrates its 60th anniversary in January. Amateurs who have had an association with CQ, as a staff member, contributing editor or author may sign "/60" after his or her callsign in those countries where it is permitted, during the first 60 days of 2005. Certificates will be available for certain numbers of contacts made with these stations. The CQ club station WW2CQ will also be activated from various parts of the United States during the special event period. Complete rules for the 'CQ Gang' 60th anniversary activity are in the December issue of CQ magazine and on the magazine's website.

I think the suggestion about the Superradio is due to many not having experience with anything better, and there's then an almost knee-jerk reaction everytime someone asks "what's a good AM/FM broadcast radio".

The Superradio is a fairly traditional single conversion receiver with a 455KHz IF for AM.  I gather they don't even use a ceramic filter in the AM IF.  It can't be all that great.  The big thing is that it has a decent speaker for a portable, and a longer loopstick which may or may not help reception.  It's analog tuned.

The YB400 is double conversion, has digital tuning, and the circuitry intended for good shortwave reception is used in the AM broadcast band.  It has two IF bandwidths, and it's pretty likely that the ceramic filters used will provide better skirt selectivity for AM broadcast band reception.

In other words, if you have the better receiver the Superradio likely won't add anything.  And if you have nothing, the reason the Superradio gets mentioned is because it's not as expensive as something better, and many stop at the SUperradio.

I am tempted by the YB400 this week, immediately for the AM broadcast band coverage.  I could make use of the better selectivity.  I use a Delco digitally tuned car radio as my bedside radio, and it is a pretty decent radio.  If it used a 455KHz IF instead of a 450KHz IF, I'd pull a ceramic filter from a CB set to get better selectivity, so I could once again receive WBZ (I lost being able to receive it some years back when a local 1040KHz station started up; the selectivity on the Delco is good, but not good enough for this case).

There were 3 analog versions and one digital.  The SRIII is an excellent receiver for the money and the sound is quite full.  Most discussions about what makes a good receiver focus on selectivity and sensitivity.  The ability to clearly hear what is being said is at least as important when id'ing a station and the SRIII shines in this area.  But because they only cost $40.00 expect that the dial will be inaccurate, controls to not feel like a Sony 7600RG, etc.  Here is a link to a lot of information on the series, modifications, etc.  Best of luck.  I'm going to get one to use around the home, while gardening, etc.
Here is a link with some detailed reviews, lists of mods., etc.

Hmmm. I don't know. I did hear them on 15660 khz about a month ago. They IDed (in English) as Voice of Africa, had some news and news analysis, all of which was harshly anti-American and anti-Israeli (much harsher than what you might hear on IRIB, for example). I made a mental note to find them again, but haven't been to find another English broadcast. Maybe English was dropped.

Hi

I'm also in Connecticut, and I've got some experience with setting up radios in offices.

The inside of a typical commercial building isn't a good place to find the signals you're looking for. Masonry walls have rebar, wood frame office buildings often have foil lined insulation. Apparently, when they design these buildings, suitability for radio listening isn't high on the list.

If you can't get decent MW reception with a good portable, don't expect much shortwave reception either, unless you do something about an antenna.

The antenna is at least 90% of the answer.

For lower frequencies, something like a Quantum Loop is probably your best bet for a desk top antenna. Other companies have made similar products over the years. Unless you get very lucky, they are likely to put you over budget.

For an in the window antenna you can get very thin coax if you want to hide the wire, or you could choose coax that looks like a network cable if you'd rather try to have it "blend in". Hook it up to a big loop of wire that goes around the perimeter of the window. The wire for the loop can be anything from thin magnet wire to the foil tape they use for burglar alarms.

If you can put up an antenna outside, you can couple your radio to it with a capacitive link so you don't need to drill a hole in the wall. It's as simple as a square of foil hooked up to your coax on one side of the window, and another hooked up to your antenna lined up on the other side of the glass.

For the radio, I use an old Standard STR-428. You're not likely to find one for sale, but it's a 1970's vintage commercial marine radio. Not a lot of dials or controls, but it's quite sensitive and it's the sort of thing clients will ask about.

The difference between a good inexpensive portable and a high end tabletop radio isn't likely to be nearly as significant for your office as the difference between a whip antenna on your desk and an antenna that's away from the metal shielding that seems to be hidden in the walls of just about every commercial building.

Popular portables worth looking at include the Degen 1103, the Grundig YB400 and the Sony 7600gr.

Good luck.

Seeing old stuff like this sell for so much makes me want to sell my Superadio II that I found at a pawn shop for $7 a few months back.  I bet it would fetch enough to buy a Superadio III and some change.

We are saying the same thing here in two different ways. Since a court is charged with determining the legality of an activity in question, then in essence, if there is no prescedent, they are determining whether or not that activity is legal or illegal. That activity is then, essentially, deemed "illegal". I am not trying to imply that a court can write statutory law.

I'd bet that SRII could fetch more than the price of a new SRIII if it's in decent shape. I guess prices like $300.00 for an RF-2900 shows there still is a real interest in shortwave radios...especially if they are retro styled and in very good condition.  I enjoyed a Panasonic RF-5000b I found at an estate sale a while back.  The hunt is much fun as the "kill" so I'll keep trolling the estate sales for bargains.

I remember playing with an RF-2900 and RF-4900 at EEB in Vienna, Virginia when the radios were new!  Sheesh!!!!

Hi everybody,

I just got a Degan 1102 today. What a great radio, I've been listening to it for a couple of hours so far. Anyway, the 220v converter that came with it got busted up during shipping. I didn't really want to deal with returning it just for the converter so I
adapters. If I stick with the 6v 300mA will it be ok?
I don't know if going with a 110v adapter would make any difference but I just wanted to make sure before something blew up. What about the size of the plug that goes into the radio? Will it fit?

Thanks,

Xavier

If the Degen is looking for 6v dc then whether it comes from a 110 or 220 volt power supply is irrelevant.  The important point is whether the center pin in the connector is negative or positive and whether you can find one to fit. At one time RS sold power supplies with changeable tips, so you might check with them. Also make sure the power supply is rated to just a little over the needs of the radio. Let me know what you find. I have a 1103 on the way.

HJS,

Since it was described as "OOP" {Opened Otherwise Perfect}
Like New [Mint] with the Original Box, Documents and Accessories.

This eBay Auction for this "Classic" Radio had to be viewed as a "Collectors" Sale. Many 'collectors' will buy several radios with 'extras' over the years to acquire a Complete Radio "Like New" In-the-Box; with Complete Documentation; and Full Accessories; and the 'collector' will spend a lot more.

Here some Lucky Collector, got a Deal an found EVERYTHING in One-Package for a Good Price.
[ Remember that the Mind Set and Motivation of a "Collector" is different the 'average' Radio Enthusiast. ]
- The One - Wants To "Possess" THE RADIO !
- The other - wants to 'use' the Radio.

Enjoy Listening to 'your' Radios and . . .
Dream of the 'possibilities' that a New Radio will Bring to Your Listening Enjoyment :o)

the "analog" jog dial lets you tune thru the memories in sequence, #00...FF, including the hex memories (e.g., #0B, #0C, ..). You can use the numeric keyboard to jump to a particular numeric memory (0 to 99) but not the hex memories using A thru F letters as there are no keypads for these hex values ;-)  Besides the 256 memories, the degen also remembers where you were last time in each band, hence the 268 or whatever memories being claimed.

I have mainly BBC (local FM) and FM stereo stations on the first bank, making it easy to jump between the stored in memory stations (e.g., with jog dial). A nice feature is that mixing SSB/CW stations with FM is easy as the memory records not only the frequency but also the modes used etc.

You can directly program in a frequency and jump to it. So I haven't tried to use the full 256 memories, it is too easy to just punch in a frequency or dial it up, or use the band scanning features to scan up or down each band for activity.

lots of radio for modest $$, lots of fun too ;-)  bobm

I'm surprised it took this long. The real risk comes from using the cell phone more like a tiny laptop. A virus could be set to dial and download any stored information, including lots of personal data. We don't think of cell phones as requiring the same security as computers, and yet they do.

YFBE,

The Tivoli "Song Book" sounds (reads) like a nice Travel Radio.
SONG-BOOK => http://www.tivoliaudio.com/pdf/SBook-manual-web.pdf

However, it has good 'quality' FM Radio Reception Listening Features with "Un-Mentioned" AM Radio reception features.

Most of these so called 'quality' Music Listener's Radios:
- Bose Wave
- Cambridge Sound Works

- Tivoli
all have 'fair' to 'good' FM Tuners;
but have 'very poor' to 'poor' AM Tuners.

Most do NOT have 'separate' External Antenna Inputs for an AM {External} Antenna and an FM {External} Antenna.

IMHO - For a 'good' Office Radio in a Building that has low signal levels and High RFI/EMF Noise Levels:
The Radio needs 'very good' AM & FM Tuners and separate External AM & FM Antenna Inputs and two Antennas;
- one designed for FM (Very High Frequency) Radio Reception
- the other designed for AM {Medium Wave} Radio Reception

MSH,

Three 'different' Radio Bands and two to three 'different' Antennas

1.  SW - For 'improved' Shortwave {SW} High Frequency Radio Reception try a simple Random Wire Antenna .
OR - Try an On-the-Window Shortwave Antenna that is 'taped' to an outside looking Window.  Keep the Antenna Wire element about 3"-6" away from the Frame of the Window.

Dipole about 3"-6" away from the Frame of the Window.  Or try placing the Dipole on the Window at a Diagonal Corner-to-Corner.

Is it one of a kind????

Lovely early home audio center, but not at that price.  There are too many other good looking receivers that are comparably styled and have the same deep sound for a fraction of that price.

Replace the TV with an LCD display.  The Horizontal oscillator operates a literally watts, and that nice saw tooth wave form generates a very generous supply of harmonics. The problem with most TV's isn't conductive as much as radiated..

I once heard the (then required) national program on Sunday nights.  At the time it sounded like it was being shortwaved from Moscow, full of echoes and various other artifacts.  I suppose the only way they'd be able to get anyone to listen to that was because everybody was required to run it.

True, that works but isolating the RF is elementary. Bad building practices are no excuse for ditching CRTs. I  myself like the the resolution and clarity CRTs can display. Were talking about junk not bad technology.

Ever notice that the longer the description the higher the price?  I had one of the 394s myself, and although I liked the looks and some of the features; in other words I can't afford a really good radio; I found that my DX-390 was a superior radio without as many goodies.  As others on other groups have said ; if you have to do that many mods to the radio it couldn't have been that hot to begin with.  No offense to the poster; just an observation.

In 1978 I tried out one of those over priced over rated ccrane radios that Art Bell and George Noory tout so much.That radio didn't pick up any better than any of my many,many other old radios (and they also tout it as having better sound quality too,that is 100 percent pure BS!) I own so I sent it back to ccrane and then I tried out one of those Sangean top of the line shortwave radios.That radio didn't show me anything either so I sent that over priced over rated radio back to ccrane too.

But like they say,90 percent (or more) of it is,Antenna,Antenna,Antenna.You can have the cheapest radio in the World and pick up all kinds of long distance radio stations with a great antenna and you can have the most expensive radio in the World with a lousy antenna and that radio will not pick up hardly anything at all but dust.

And also note, that the region is part of India since 1967 or 1968, so you heard a station in India, rather than a separate country.  Unless this is your first log from India, you can not count it as NASWA country 235 confirmed in your logbook.
It still might be quite a DX catch, though, so, congratulations! and Enjoy!

Wanting to be introduced to the sister of a SAINT who is happy because YOU are happy make one a pervert? Having a selfless, caring mate like that would be a true blessing and one could certainly hope these traits would be present in a sibling of this paragon of womanly virtues.

No interference problems at all. I've been lucky in the computer components. A TenTec 320 sits about four feet from the right side of the monitor with NO problems. There is a coax going to the attic and from there to the end of the house, where a longwire goes to the garage peak.

Some others haven't been so lucky. I've read of a gentleman who had to use a much longer serial cable to distance the radio.

I have the coax shield grounded at the connection to the longwire

It's the 'Ace' who is an alcoholic boor with a gun fetish. 'cuhulin' is a product of the disintegrating US school system. I don't know which one to pity more...they're BOTH so deserving.

At the least 'cuhulin' has a little dog to keep him company. The 'Ace'

I hate to be the bearer of bad news to you, but it is indeed a separate NASWA country. It may be a 'part' of India, but under NASWA rules it was and will remain a distinct radio entity.

I suggest you check the NASWA List:

http://www.anarc.org/naswa/list/

Look under India on the list.

>From Tad Cook, K7RA

To all radio amateurs

ARLP052 Propagation de K7RA

The 7-day averages for solar flux and sunspot numbers declined this week, and the averages for geomagnetic A index rose. The average daily sunspot number declined over 19 points to 26.9, and average solar flux was down over 8 points to 88.7. Sunspot counts have been quite low, and will continue their retreat for about 2 more years.

If you look on page 12 of the latest edition of NOAA SEC's weekly Preliminary Report and Forecast of Solar Geophysical Data (for this week see, http://www.sec.noaa.gov/weekly/pdf/prf1528.pdf , and the index at, http://www.sec.noaa.gov/weekly/index.html) you'll observe the predicted smoothed sunspot number for this month is 30, December 2005 is 10, and the lowest value is 5, projected for December 2006 and January 2007.

Following the December three years from now, in 2008, the monthly sunspot count for cycle 24 should increase rapidly. But in between will be some long spells with no sunspots at all. It is interesting to note that the longest period of 0 sunspots in recent memory was a little over 7 weeks during September and October of 1996, and the next low period we are talking about predicted for the end of 2006 is about 10 years after that.

Average sunspot cycles are about 11.1 years long, but have been as short as 7 and as long as 17 years. The average rise from minimum to maximum takes 4.8 years, and the average decline is around 6.2 years, so cycles rise faster than they decline.

The most active day in terms of geomagnetic indices over the past week was Monday, December 12, when a robust solar wind stream drove the mid-latitude A index to 24, the planetary A index to 36, and Alaska's college A index to 48. The quiet period this week was 2-3 days later on December 14-15 when the mid-latitude A index was 4 and 3.

Over last weekend during the ARRL 10-Meter Contest, Sunday had worse conditions than Saturday. There were periods when I couldn't hear anything from Seattle on 10-meters except stations in South America. This was the north-south trans-equatorial propagation commonly observed during periods of high geomagnetic activity. It isn't a case of propagation being enhanced over the north-south path, but this might be the only propagation mode available.

Our earth is now passing through a solar wind stream from a coronal hole. For Friday, December 17 the predicted planetary A index is 20, followed by 15, 8 and 5 for Saturday through Monday. We may expect slightly higher solar flux (which is somewhat related to sunspot counts) with this weekend's flux value around 90. This is expected to rise to around 105 by December 23.

A note from the Geomagnetic Dept of the Geophysical Institute of Prague says December 19 and 20 should be quiet, December 21 quiet to unsettled, and December 18 and 23 unsettled.

If you would like to comment or have a tip, email the author at, k7ra@arrl.net.

For more information concerning propagation and an explanation of the numbers used in this bulletin see the ARRL Technical Information Service propagation page at, http://www.arrl.org/tis/info/propagation.html.

Sunspot numbers for December 9 through 15 were 39, 39, 16, 26, 22, 18 and 28 with a mean of 26.9. 10.7 cm flux was 87.4, 84.8, 89.8, 90.5, 89.7, 89.3 and 89.3, with a mean of 88.7. Estimated planetary A indices were 8, 10, 15, 36, 11, 7 and 6 with a mean of 13.3.

Estimated mid-latitude A indices were 7, 8, 11, 24, 8, 4 and 3, with a mean of 9.3.

Hi
I don't know if it's one of kind, but it's in great condition judging from the looks and what the seller describes. Remember it's 65 years old.
A collectors item. Now these bidders are the real hard core radio McCoys.

Scroll all the way down and look at all the great pictures. It's a pleasure to look at.

65 years old? More like late 1970's early 80's. Still, for a collector of such things it may be worth the price.

No doubt...it is a nice looking radio and a nice piece of furniture too.  I understand how collectors focus on and appreciate details that are not apparent to most of us.  I was at an auction not too long ago where an attractive but otherwise unremarkable pembroke table went for $350,000 because it had a makers label.  Without that label it might not have reached 1/10 that price.  The buyer and seller are certainly happy with the radio deal, and that is what counts for them.

Carlson, Wash. Post misinformation on Social Security's "solvency" furthered Bush administration's crisis rhetoric

CNN co-host Tucker Carlson and The Washington Post bolstered the Bush administration's crisis rhetoric on Social Security by providing misleading accounts of the federal program's "solvency."

On the December 16 edition of CNN's Crossfire, Carlson purported to "correct" former Clinton national economic adviser Gene Sperling's statement that "Social Security does not become insolvent until 2042." Carlson responded: "In 2018, just to correct you ... that's, again, only 14 years. Benefits will overtake revenues."

In a December 17 article in The Washington Post, after noting that President Bush "said Social Security will be paying out more than it collects" by 2018, staff writer Peter Baker reported that congressional Democrats are "[c]iting different accounting than the president's" to "argue" that under the current system Social Security will "still be solvent for nearly 50 years."

In fact, Sperling is correct in noting that Social Security is projected to remain solvent until 2042, according to the same authoritative U.S. government report upon which Carlson relied: the 2004 annual report of the Board of Trustees of the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance and Disability Insurance Trust Funds (OASDI). 2042 is the year that the Social Security trust fund is projected to run out; the year Carlson cited, 2018, represents the time when the program's payouts to retirees are projected to exceed tax revenue. At that time, the government will have to supplement revenues with the Social Security trust fund to meet payment obligations to retirees, but the system will not be insolvent.

The Post's Baker, on the other hand, misleadingly suggested that one's view of when Social Security becomes insolvent is a matter of partisan opinion. It is not. Bush is talking about one thing -- what is projected to happen in 2018 -- and the Democrats are talking about another -- when the system is projected to become insolvent. By conflating the two issues, Baker suggested that the Democrats are being partisan in their assertions about projected insolvency. In fact, Sperling's and the Congressional Democrats' assertions reflect, respectively, the presumably nonpartisan (though the Bush administration is well-represented) Social Security Board of Trustees and the at- least-equally nonpartisan Congressional Budget Office, which projects insolvency by 2052, rather than 2042.

From the December 16 edition of CNN's Crossfire:

SPERLING: I do believe that, even though Social Security does not become insolvent until 2042, we as a country would be better to take on the problem now.

CARLSON: In 2018, just to correct you, in 2018, which is only 14 years from now, according to the board of trustees of overseers of Social Security, that's, again, only 14 years. Benefits will overtake revenues. So that's actually pretty soon.

From Baker's December 17 Washington Post article, "Bush Lays Out a Plan to Revise the Social Security System":

Bush made clear [in the White House economic conference] that he intends to expend considerable political energy in pushing for a partial privatization of Social Security to help secure the program, which faces sizable shortfalls over the next few decades. By 2018, he said, Social Security will be paying out more than it collects, and over the long term the system faces a $10.4 trillion unfunded liability. ... Congressional Democrats dismissed the conference as a public relations exercise distorting fiscal reality. Citing different accounting than the president's, Senate Minority Leader Harry M. Reid (Nev.) and House Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi (Calif.) argued that Social Security would still be solvent for nearly 50 years.

With the fees I would pay to Subscription Radio in 2 months, I could put together a very good antenna for office use.

Guess you better grab that board, and go 'hang ten' on that wave, 'tard boy.

Then you can leave the shortwave to the big boys.

In this modern day of technology,why not have a shortwave radio at home with a good antenna and control and listen to the radio at home while at work miles away in an office building?   www.smarthome.com and some other stores sell devices which can be used to do similar things with computers.Or does that make any sense? OK,I am a dummy and I doubt if I could figure out how to do such things.

When spy satellites can detect and listen to the static from your electric shaver there are no "unknown - mysterious" radio transmissions. Perhaps the SETI project may interest you?

Speakng of old tv sets,how come they don't make new tv sets anymore so we can sit things on top of our new tv sets,the new ones have such weird shapes to them.For instance,my tv set I bought a few years ago,I can not sit anything on top of that tv set but my older model tv set I use for my satellite tv,I can easily sit things on top of that tv set.

My computer monitor is a refurbished 22 inch screen NEC Multisync FP 1350 I bought from tigerdirect.com earlier this year but tigerdirect's quality control SUCKS! When my monitor got here there was a piece of broken off thumbscrew broken off in the right side of the port where my fifteen foot computer to computer monitor cable attatches to that port.I cut a little piece of plywood and cut a little notch in it and I fiberglassed it by the side of the port and I used a plastic tie to secure that side of my cable to the 15 pin port.
I didn't feel like packing my monitor up and sending it back to tigerdirect so I fixed it myself.

> 2004 annual report of the Board of Trustees of the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance and Disability Insurance Trust Funds (OASDI). 2042 is the year that the Social Security trust fund is projected to run out; the year Carlson cited, 2018, represents the time when the program's payouts to retirees are projected to exceed tax revenue. At that time, the government will have to supplement revenues with the Social Security trust fund to meet payment obligations to retirees, but the system will not be insolvent.
> The Post's Baker, on the other hand, misleadingly suggested that one's view of when Social Security becomes insolvent is a matter of partisan opinion. It is not. Bush is talking about one thing -- what is projected to happen in 2018 -- and the Democrats are talking about another -- when the system is projected to become insolvent. By conflating the two issues, Baker suggested that the Democrats are being partisan in their assertions about projected insolvency. In fact, Sperling's and the Congressional Democrats' assertions reflect, respectively, the presumably nonpartisan (though the Bush administration is well-represented) Social Security Board of Trustees and the at- least-equally nonpartisan Congressional Budget Office, which projects insolvency by 2052, rather than 2042.

> From Baker's December 17 Washington Post article, "Bush Lays Out a Plan to Revise the Social Security System":
> Bush made clear [in the White House economic conference] that he intends to expend considerable political energy in pushing for a partial privatization of Social Security to help secure the program, which faces sizable shortfalls over the next few decades. By 2018, he said, Social Security will be paying out more than it collects, and over the long term the system faces a $10.4 trillion unfunded liability. ... Congressional Democrats dismissed the conference as a public relations exercise distorting fiscal reality. Citing different accounting than the president's, Senate Minority Leader Harry M. Reid (Nev.) and House Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi (Calif.) argued that Social Security would still be solvent for nearly 50 years.

is in "as is" condition? Is it ok if we write a check from an old account that "might" clear? Sounds fair enough.

Can anyone suggest or recommend a US or Canada-based supplier for the Sony AN-LP1 Active Loop antenna, who would supply to the UK?

It seems there aren't any of these Sony items available in Europe.

Don't look for any investigations into corruption in the government until at least 2009 - when George Bush is out of office.  BTW, with accusations flying about news media being either "left" or "right" oriented, I've bookmarked some news organizations in Australia and England.  Interesting stuff.  Of course, we may well find our ISPs start blocking these sites for some "unknown" reason too LOL

Did you get a load of the prizes he gave out to some folks who screwed up royally with this Iraqi mess?

The Superadio has two bandwidths and pretty good adj channel selectivity using the narrow setting. Also, I can't say for sure, but the YB400 probably doesn't use dual conversion for BCB.

It looked like the OP actually uses his portables as portables, so that's the main problem he'd have with the Superadio (other than the dial calibration, of course), since it is a big sucker.

I have never used a YB400, but I do have experience with a number of "real" MW radios. The only Chinese portable I have is a RS DX399, and the Superadio is much better at MW, both in terms of weak signal readability and adj channel selectivity. Also a single set of batteries lasts eons in the Superadio.

READ - AM/MW DXing = Your Radio + Lazy Susan + Select-A-Tenna
http://groups.yahoo.com/group/Shortwave-SWL-Antenna/message/1787

As a stand-a-lone Radio for AM Broadcast Program Listening the GE Superadios are the low cost performance favorate by many casual AM/MW DXers.
+ Use a Select-A-Tenna and a Lazy Susan with the GE Superadios and you can do some reasonable AM/MW DXing for about $100-$150.
+ Plug a Long Wire (Random Wire)Antenna into the 1/8" Jack on the Select-A-Tenna Model 541-M and you can generally 'improve' the listenable range of your AM/MW DXing both day and night.

The GE Superadio III with the Dual 6" and 2" speakers provides 'quality' Mono-Aural Sound for FM Music Program Listeners.
= Nice Sound with Long Term Listenability :o)

The GE Superadios do not cover the Shortwave Bands and for that the Grundig Yacht Boy 400 PE does a good job as a 'portable' AM/FM/Shortwave Radio.
- The Grundig Yacht Boy 400 PE as a stand-a-lone radio; does not perform as well as the GE Superadios for AM/MW DXing.
- The Grundig Yacht Boy 400 PE does not have the long term Listenability of the GE Superadios.

FWIW - Besides the Grundig Yacht Boy 400 PE http://groups.yahoo.com/group/Grundig-Yacht-Boy-Radios/consider these 'portable' AM/FM/Shortwave Radios as Travel Radios for Shortwave Listening:

http://groups.yahoo.com/group/7600GR/
- Sangean ATS-909 / RadioShack DX398 {SSB}
http://groups.yahoo.com/group/DX398/

If you are looking for a One-Radio 'compromise' then consider the Grundig S350 "Super Radio" Tecsun BCL-2000 for both AM/MW casual DXing and Shortwave Program Listening.

My friend worked all summer around 1967 to save enough money for the Star Roamer. I built the kit for him. Unfortunately it didn't work and we had to send it back to Knight-Kit. They replaced a bad I.F. transformer and we got the radio back in working condition. It was a fun project but he probably should have got one of the Heath-Kit radios instead. They were generally better quality.

The 2010 is certainly one of the finest general coverage portables ever made but probably not worth more than about $300 used. That said, people sometimes buy radios for reasons other than performance.

Here's a link with some product information, but no price or release date:

<http://www.etoncorp.com/US/products/product_specs.aspx?specs=true&prodID=9&catID=2&subCatID=4>

It looks like they're now offering an outboard speaker so you can use it as a portable stereo.

They'd be foolish not to incorporate AM Stereo.  If it will sound good as people say it will, then music AM's will make a comeback.

If they have to be analog at night, they can broadcast in C-Quam AM Stereo.

The 2010 has more than enough sensitivity and AM selectivity with the sync' detector for MW Dx'ing. All it needs is a good antenna and possibly a passive preselector to control intermod's from strong local MW stations.

The first generation of transistor radios cost several hundred dollars in today's money, which is similar to the first pocket calculators in the 70's.

Let's begin to answer your concerns with the notion that every SENSE has its own form of "rationality."

At 0615 it's S-3 here in Michigan on 3700 must be CA or close or I wouldn't hear it here. 75m too long at 1:00 in the morning.
Anyone have a transmitter site nailed down for this one yet?

Something To Think About - PRICE WISE !
I would guess that you would have to compare this to a Palomar Ferrite Rod Loop Antenna System.
Palomar LA-1 Loop Amp Base @ $135
=> http://www.universal-radio.com/catalog/sw_ant/0445.html
+ Very Long Wave Loop Ferrite Rod Element
Coverage 50 kHz to 150 kHz @ $ 150
+ Long Wave Loop Ferrite Rod Element
Coverage 150 kHz to 550 kHz @ $ 135
+ Medium Wave (AM/MW) Ferrite Rod Loop Element Coverage 530-1700 kHz @ $ 135
$ Total Cost: $455 +S&H

Also, the Quantum "QX" Pro 15" Ferrite Rod Loop Antenna System
=> http://www.dxtools.com/QXPro.htm
Covers both Long Wave and Medium Wave Bands 150 kHz to 2000 kHz $ Cost: $299 +S&H
Or a 'used' Kiwa MW Air-Core Loop Antenna on eBay
SEARCH = Consumer Electronics : Radios : CB/HAM/Shortwave for 'kiwa' KIWA=> http://tinyurl.com/2fcqq
For more information on the Kiwa MW Air-Core Loop Antenna goto:
KIWA-MW-LOOP=> http://www.kiwa.com/kiwaloop.html
RUMOR has it that Kiwa Electronics is currently working on a 'new' AM/MW {Loop?Ferrite} Antenna for AM/MW DXers.
? ? ? Now Is That True ? ? ?

Mark, $19.95 is what I paid for it in 1966, and it worked the first time I fired it up after I built it. I was 15 at the time, and this had been my first attempt at soldering, so I was surprised when it actually worked I.  still have the assembly manual for it, as well as the short-wave listeners guide included with it. Needless to say, many of the stations listed in the guide, have been shut-down for decades. It's still in good shape, but the 60 cycle hum I hear, indicates it's due for a filter capacitor change. Good DXing to you, Gary

YS is still comming in on 3.700 mHz at 07:10 UTC (02:10 AM) in Western MD about s3 to s5. and also on 6.500 slightly weaker. Band seems open to the west.
Also noted foreign speaking stations on 3.700 probably Mexico or Western USA.

Question: What is the URL of the WUN ListServer ?
Is this some kind of an SWL Message board..?
Not familiar with this one pse post a link - tnx!

Wouldn't people with backpacks use something a little higher frequency to communicate? I just can't see anyone with a backpack being able to tote around an antenna suitable for portable operation in the 30 m band.

There are some 'tards on here who think every damn thing they hear is Arabic...

Boggling, to say the least, considering that the Chechens don't speak Arabic.

Tokyo Hi-Power makesa handheld 40 meter (7 MHz) handheld SSB unit, that is just a little bigger than an older Radio Shack 5 watt CB set (about 4x2x12 inches, give or take). In fact some pictures of Osama Bin Laden show him with such a unit in his hand. It uses a "loaded whip" antenna, and is probably the only thing that would work from valley to valley comms...by beaming sigs upward to be bounced downward off the F2 or other layer.

Yep, them 'loaded whip' antennas are extremely effective at 'beaming' signals upward.

I can't wait until 2005 to hear more whacky ideas here on rec.radio.shortwave.

Cool Dude,
Take pictures. That sounds like a cool place to be.

It's very cold here, maybe 45 but the wind's blowing 60 with light sand. I'll keep my shorts and tee shirt on but I may have to put a light wind breaker on.

Well, tomorrow is my birthday, I'm not getting older, I'm getting better. What I use to do all night it takes all night to do but it's a lot more fun!!!!

Merry Christmas to All.

No problem, fuckstain.  Your support for Saddam is duly noted - I'm quite sure you thought he was the greatest leader on earth.
Unfortunately, 300,000 Iraqis dug up from mass graves don't share your enthusiasm for him.  Neither to the Kurds and Iranians he gassed to death, or the Kuwaitis.  But all that stuff is here nor there - you are obviously enthralled with tyranny, so trying to convince you otherwise probably is pointless.

While I would not pay that much for one of his modified DX-394's because I can do the mods myself, hundreds of others have. His price is not unreasonable when you consider that the typical selling price for unmodified ones is around $150. The replacement filter from Kiwa would cost you $30 delivered (I'm sure he bought up stock in quantity at a fraction of that price) and the other parts maybe $10 or so delivered. Then factor in a couple of hours time at, say, $30-$50 an hour and you're into the 250-300 range total. That's still well below the original selling price.

Sure, if you can afford it, spend more on a better radio. Last I looked, a new R8B was well over $1k. The used DX-394 at $150-$250 still occupies a sweet spot for tabletop general communication receivers, in significant quantity and with little competition.

3 WAYS OF MAKING $ WITH MINIMAL OR NO $!
1: http://www.co-opworld.com/member/41150/?5   This is for everyone - it's free! =3D)
2: http://PrePaidLegal.com/go/ASahagian   This is for those who are SERIOUS about having fun & getting paid by Helping others.  Making a difference while making a living.
3: HOW TO TURN $6 INTO $6,000!!!!!!  This is for those with $6 and a little faith in your fellow man....
READING THIS COULD CHANGE YOUR LIFE!
I found this on a bulletin board and decided to try it. A little while back, I was browsing through newsgroups, just like you are now, and came across an article similar to this that said you could make thousands of dollars within weeks with only an initial investment of $6.00! So I thought, Yeah right, this must be a scam, but like most of us, I was curious, so I kept reading. Anyway, it said that you send $1.00 to each of the 6 names and address stated in the article. You then place your own name and address in the bottom of the list at #6, and post the article in at least 200 newsgroups. (There are thousands) No catch, that was it. So after thinking it over, and talking to a few people first, I thought about trying it. I figured: what have I got to lose except 6 stamps and $6.00, right? Then I invested the measly $6.00. Well GUESS WHAT!!... Within 7 days, I started getting money in the mail! I was shocked! I figured it would end soon, but the money just kept coming in. In my first week, I made about $25.00. By the end of the second week I had made a total of over $1,000.00! In the third week I had over $10,000.00 and it's still growing. This is now my fourth week and I have made a total of just over $42,000.00 and it's still coming in rapidly. It's certainly worth $6.00, and 6 stamps, I have spent more than that on the lottery!! Let me tell you how this works and most importantly, why it works.... Also, make sure you print a copy of this article NOW, so you can get the information off of it, as you need it. I promise you that if you follow the directions exactly, that you will start making more money than you thought possible by doing something so easy!
Suggestion: Read this entire message carefully! (Print it out or download it.) Follow the simple directions and watch the money comes in! It's easy. It's legal. And, your investment is only $6.00 (Plus postage)

IMPORTANT: This is not a rip-off; it is not indecent; it is not illegal; and it is virtually no risk - it really works!!!! If all of the following instructions are adhered to, you will receive extraordinary dividends.

PLEASE NOTE: Please follow these directions EXACTLY, and $50,000 or more can be yours in 20 to 60 days. This program remains successful because of the honesty and integrity of the participants.

STEP 1: Get 6 separate pieces of paper and write the following on each piece of paper; PLEASE PUT ME ON YOUR MAILING LIST. Now get 6 US $1.00 bills and place ONE inside EACH of the 6 pieces of paper so the bill will not be seen through the envelope (to prevent thievery). Next, place one paper in each of the 6 envelopes and seal them. You should now have 6 sealed envelopes, each with a piece of paper stating the above phrase, your name and address, and a $1.00 bill. What you are doing is creating a service. THIS IS ABSOLUTELY LEGAL! You are requesting a legitimate service and you are paying for it! Like most of us I was a little skeptical and a little worried about the legal aspects of it all. So I checked it out with the U.S. Post Office (1-800-725-2161) and they confirmed that it is indeed legal! Mail the 6 envelopes to the following addresses:

Mailing Addresses :

R=2E Overton
P=2EO. Box 18818
So. Lake Tahoe, CA 96151

KEVIN LEE
8377 APT. I MONTGOMERY RUN RD.
ELLICOTT CITY MD 21043

3:
Stephanie Hicks
1283 Evening Canyon
Henderson NV 89014

4:
Everett Shuper
P=2EO. Box 874
Hibbing,Mn. 55746

5:
C=2E Campbell
564 E. 600 N.
Orem, UT 84097

6:
Andrew Jacob Sahagian
98 Front St.
North Arlington, NJ  07031-5848

STEP 2: Now take the #1 name off the list that you see above, move the other names up (6 becomes 5, 5 becomes 4, etc.) and add YOUR Name as number 6 on the list.  Also if applicable, change the 2 links above to link to your new sites!!

STEP 3: Change anything you need to, but try to keep this article as close to original as possible. Now, post your amended article to at least 200 newsgroups. (I think there are close to 24,000 groups) All you need is 200, but remember, the more you post, the more money you make! ALSO keep a copy in your SHARED Folder for peer-2-peer networks like Kazaa & WinMX. This is perfectly legal! If you have any doubts, refer to Title 18 Sec. 1302 & 1341 of the Postal lottery laws.

Keep a copy of these steps for yourself and, whenever you need money, you can use it again, and again.

PLEASE REMEMBER that this program remains successful because of the honesty and integrity of the participants and by their carefully adhering to the directions. Look at it this way. If you are of integrity, the program will continue and the money that so many others have received will come your way.

NOTE: You may want to retain every name and address sent to you, either on a computer or hard copy, and keep the notes people send you. This VERIFIES that you are truly providing a service. (Also, it might be a good idea to wrap the $1 bill in dark paper to reduce the risk of mail theft.)

So, as each post is downloaded and the directions carefully followed, six members will be reimbursed for their participation as a List Developer with one dollar each. Your name will move up the list geometrically so that when your name reaches the #1 position you will be receiving thousands of dollars in CASH!!! What an opportunity for only $6.00 ($1.00 for each of the first six people listed above) Send it now, add your own name to the list and you're in business!

---DIRECTIONS ----- FOR HOW TO POST TO NEWSGROUPS------------

Step 1) You do not need to re-type this entire letter to do your own posting. Simply put your cursor at the beginning of this letter and drag your cursor to the bottom of this document, and select 'copy' from the edit menu. This will copy the entire letter into the computer's memory.

Step 2) Open a blank 'notepad' file and place your cursor at the top of the blank page. From the 'edit' menu select 'paste'. This will paste a copy of the letter into notepad so that you can add your name to the list.

Step 3) Save your new notepad file as a .txt file. If you want to do your postings in different settings, you'll always have this file to go back to.

Step 4) Use Netscape or Internet explorer and try searching for various newsgroups (on-line forums, message boards, chat sites, discussions)

Step 5) Visit these message boards and post this article as a new message by highlighting the text of this letter and selecting paste from the edit menu. Fill in the Subject, this will be the header that everyone sees as they scroll through the list of postings in a particular group, click the post message button. You're done with your first one! Congratulations...THAT'S IT! All you have to do is jump to different newsgroups and post away, after you get the hang of it, it will take about 30 seconds for each newsgroup!

REMEMBER, THE MORE NEWSGROUPS YOU POST IN, THE MORE MONEY YOU WILL MAKE!! BUT YOU HAVE TO POST A MINIMUM OF 200

That's it! You will begin receiving money from around the world within days! You may eventually want to rent a P.O.Box due to the large amount of mail you will receive. If you wish to stay anonymous, you can invent a name to use, as long as the postman will deliver it.

JUST MAKE SURE ALL THE ADDRESSES ARE CORRECT. **
Now the WHY part: Out of 200 postings, say I receive only 5 replies (a very low example). So then I made $5.00 with my name at #6 on the letter. Now, each of the 5 persons who just sent me $1.00 make the MINIMUM 200 postings, each with my name at #5 and only 5 persons respond to each of the original 5, that is another $25.00 for me, now those 25 each make 200 MINIMUM posts with my name at #4 and only 5 replies each, I will bring in an additional $125.00! Now, those 125 persons turn around and post the MINIMUM 200 with my name at #3 and only receive 5 replies each, I will make an additional $626.00! OK, now here is the fun part, each of those 625 persons post a MINIMUM 200 letters with my name at #2 and they each only receive 5 replies, that just made me $3,125.00!!! Those 3,125 persons will all deliver this message to 200 newsgroups with my name at #1 and if still 5 persons per 200 newsgroups react I will receive $15,625,00! With an original investment of only $6.00! AMAZING! When your name is no longer on the list, you just take the latest posting in the newsgroups, and send out another $6.00 to names on the list, putting your name at number 6 again. And start posting again. The thing to remember is: do you realize that thousands of people all over the world are joining the Internet and reading these articles everyday? JUST LIKE YOU are now!!
So, can you afford $6.00 and see if it really works?? I think so...
People have said, "What if the plan is played out and no one sends you the money? So what! What are the chances of that happening when there are tons of new honest users and new honest people who are joining the Internet and newsgroups everyday and are willing to give it a try? Estimates are at 20,000 to 50,000 new users, every day, with thousands of those joining the actual Internet.
Remember: play FAIRLY and HONESTLY and this will really work.
PS: Run a Google search for some of the names & addresses in this document & realize how well this works! -A.J.S.

I never mentioned the R8B, I said an R8, which I have seen sold for $350 and is a far superior receiver. I am also sure that he does not get his filters from kiwa but has another source and gets them for $2-$3 each, it is just a low cost murata filter.

and I have seen MANY 394's for $110 on ebay so I think he is ripping people off at $260.

Thanks for putting that up Chris. I'm thinking here that at some point in time that there was another transmission or transmissions from the south-west that were also mysterious? I can't seem to recall exactly what they involved, but my memory recalls that they too seemed to be from the south-west, and, that the mystery was never explained.

David, so far it looks like the satellite radio business model is still rather shaky.

XM has over 1,000,000 subscribers -- they're still not profitable.

Sirius is bleeding even more cash and has just over 600,000 subscribers. They're betting people will subscribe to hear Howard Stern or the NFL, both of which they have signed for big dollars. Stern may be able to bring some people in, but the size of his salary will continue to make it tough to climb out of the red.

The NFL choice doesn't make sense to me -- most people will want to listen to the slant from their local stations for free. Here in the New Orleans area, we like to listen to WWL radio while we watch the games on TV, just for the local flavor. It can be hilarious -- after all, it is the Saints.

The "digital" part is misleading as well. The quality (kbs) is not up to CD standards at all -- it's more like medium-quality MP3's. Most home-audio people won't be happy with that, either.  This will have to improve, but 250+ kbs streaming audio is already available on the net for free.

Yes, but if you look again at the post you replied to it was all obviously due to the fact that we didn't vote for shit for brains Kerry.

TOM,
Another factor may be that for many casual Shortwave Listeners they 'know' the RadioShack "DX" Receiver Band Name.
They may have heard of Drake, Yaesu, Icom, Kenwood JRC, Ten Tec and others.  But they 'know' the RadioShack "DX" Receiver Band Name and trust it.

It may not be logical:  But it is a 'feeling', and for some "Feelings Are Facts" [.]

Weird. I tried those just now at 1830 UTC or so, and 3700 is just as loud as ever, 4300 just a little less loud, 6500 about half the strength of 3700, and 10500 very weak. I shouldn't be hearing ANYTHING in the lower frequencies at this time of day (about 10:30 am local time), I can't even hear WWV on 5 Mhz, but I can hear Yosemite Sam loud and clear. It makes me wonder if Sam is actually coming in via GROUNDWAVE at my location (Sacramento, California) which means it MIGHT be coming from one of the 2 or 3 "secret" military transmitters within 20 miles of me. I don't have any DF equipment at my disposal, so I can't confirm this. I can't shake the idea that this is some sort of military or spy signal, perhaps as one poster said a "go signal" for some sort of operation.

8 months ago?  I don't have a clue about that, but what I think you may be referring to is the now infamous sign on the USS Lincoln above Bush while he gave a speech last year that said "Mission Accomplished".  The left has gleefully trotted out the fact that, according to them, the mission was NOT accomplished and how dare the president suggest that it was.  Problem is, as usual when dealing with lefties, they play fast and loose with the facts.  That sign was meant as a pat on the back for all the soldiers, sailors, airmen and marines who marched on Baghdad and toppeled Saddam's regime in 3 weeks.  It wasn't meant to suggest the war was over.  It was simply a thank you to the troops for a job well done - nothing more.

I guess I just don't share your propensity towards hoplessness and pessimism with every casualty or incident of bad news in a war - that's what led to the loss of Vietnam to the communists.  We didn't lose that war military.  We lost that war when the nattering naybobs of negativity on the left changed the definition of "success" from being mission-based to one of casualty counts.  The left and their co-conspirators in the media gleefully trotted out body counts on a daily basis with judgemental clucking about whether or not the war was "worth the price". Eventually, public opinion tilted against the war, thanks to this unending onslaught of negativity from the left, and we pulled out.  And thanks to the anti-war types and their friends in the media, Vietnam is a dirt poor communist state with no hope or chance at freedom.  Sorry, but having seen the results of pessimism and hand-wringing in that war, I believe (and I also know from experience, being ex-military) that our troops and commanders are the finest in the world. I trust their judgement. I know beyond a shadow of a doubt that, so long as the troops know we support them back home, Iraq will be a safe, stable democracy.

I think the fact that we've been in Iraq for only 18 months does bear repeating - It is unfortunate that so many in our country, particularly those of the liberal and left persuasion, were and remain willing to pull out of Iraq immediately after the first casualties.  As if casualty counts in a war determine whether or not the original mission was right or wrong.  If you believe that ousting Saddam to prevent him from continuing to lend support and safe harbor to terrorists and enemies of the United States was correct, as I do, then casualties, while tragic, do not sway me from the goal of completing the mission. The mission MUST be completed successfully - nothing else matters.  If, on the otherhand, you believe that ousting Saddam was wrong, then I suppose I can understand why the casualty numbers are harangued over and used to discredit the president, the military, rumsfeld, et al. But hey - this is America...anyone has a right to voice their ignorance.

I'd be surprised if they don't show up in Syria.  Some reports I've read indicated witnesses saw many trucks crossing the Iraq border with Syria shortly before the start of the war.  Then again, they could be buried.  Saddam's chief nuke scientist, a guy named Obeidi, showed coalition troops where he buried centrifuge and nuke parts and plans at the direction of Saddam - in his garden behind his house.  We may never know where they all are, but again - to me, this was about more than WMD.  Saddam harbored and supported terrorists.  He needed to go.

Fact of the matter is, Germany and Japan both caused problems for the US occupation after World War II - less so in Japan, because, as you correctly noted, they were bombed back to the stone age.  But Allies in post World War II Germany were attacked on a regular basis by members of the Nazi regime, Hitler sympathizers, and the like.  We were in Germany for a good five years before German soverignty was restored.

The same argument was made about Afghanistan.  Liberals fretted incessently, saying that Afghans really didn't want to be free, they supported the taliban, and yadda yadda yawn.  I was skeptical about those arguments then about Afghanistan, and I was right to be as history has proven - and I am skeptical of the same arguments about Iraq now.  Iraqis have been polled repeatedly about this - most say they want to try democracy.  And I don't blame them.

> In summation, I don't think the situations are analogous.  Both

That doesn't make sense. Both countries were bombed into oblivion - especially Japan. They had nothing to lose. I think eventually, the more rational, cooler heads in those two countries realized that representative governments, democratic elections, and the U.S. as an ally made more sense than to try to mount some sort of guerilla campaign in opposition to the occupation.

I think both can co-exist. Religion and freedom are not antithetical. Turkey is an example. Afghanistan appears to be successfully implementing democracy while maintaining respect for islam and islamic traditions.

I don't think ousting Saddam was an act of "policing the world", although I do beleive the world is a better place without him. The mission in Iraq was first and foremost an act of self-preservation for the US. Saddam supported terrorists and gave them safe harbor. Saddam himself admitted to possessing WMD, so that was a concern too - if it turns out that Saddam was lying about WMD in a typical blustery display of ego, or if he was lied to by his own commanders, either way, we'd never have known for sure without going in the way we did and ousting him. Saddam wasn't cooperating much with the UN, and even when he was, the UN was (and remains) an ineffective, corrupt institution.

> For argument's sake, Why should a sovereign nation open its borders to reveal state secrets?

A reminder - we didn't just pick Iraq out on a map to bully. Saddam started and lost the Gulf War. Saddam lost his right to maintain state secrets about weapons and the like when he signed the agreement to end hostilities with the US and our coalition back in 1991. Saddam spent the next 12 years lying, cheating and deceiving the UN weapons inspectors at every turn. He kicked them out altogether at one point, and there were NO inspectors in Iraq at all between 1998 and 2002 until one George W. Bush reminded the UN that Saddam had thumbed his nose at them about the inspections.

> If Russia and China asked us to open up our borders to show that we are not harboring bombs and terrorists, should we do it?

Apples and oranges. See above. The demands made of Saddam were the direct result of his defeat in the Gulf War. No one was demanding Saddam do anything before he decided to invade Kuwait.

> You are right about Saddam's ego, it was big, and it seriously "misunderestimated" ;-) the ability fo the US to come in and get him.

I'll agree with you about Libya and disagree about South Africa.  South Africa wasn't under pressure from anyone to do anything.  They decided as a country to disarm themselves of nukes.  They opened up all of their weapons sites, their records, etc.  They had nothing to hide, and welcomed scrutiny from the outside world to prove they were serious about disarming.  And they were indeed serious.  South Africa demonstrated what disarmament looks like.  The fiasco in Iraq with Saddam was entirely different.

I have problems with the Patriot Act too.  I want it reviewed by the Supreme Court for constitutionality.  There are parts of the act that seem on their face to be unconstitutional.  There are other parts of it that seem perfectly fine.  I'm not a lawyer - I'll let the Supreme Court hash it out.

I think maybe some historical context is necessary here.  Recall that John F. Kennedy, the last democrat I admired, was a typical democrat for his time.  He was hawkish on defense, supported the military, pro-business, and he cut taxes...since Kennedy died, the democratic party has been co-opted by the radical left in the country, and democrats have moved from a centrist position to the far left. Democrats now openly despise the military, as Clinton did - they look first to defense to cut in order to pay for the latest cradle-to-grave government welfare program, and they don't believe in or support entrepreneurs and business - they believe business is inherently evil and must be punished in the form of choking taxation and over-reaching regulation. If high taxes and regulation don't drive businesses out of business, then the government will step in and sue for some dubious reason, as they are now with Microsoft and other wildly successful companies. If you're not taxed to death, you're regulated to death. If you're not regulated to death, you are sued to death. These are NOT American values.  These are socialistic values, and the democratic party of today embraces them whole-heartedly.  Republicans, otoh, have moved center.  Most republicans support the military and a strong national defense; they support businesses and entrepreneurs.  They want lower taxes and less government intrusion in the lives of individuals. They believe in common sense regulation, not over-reaching, intrusive strangulation.  They support individuals and the right of an individual to decide whether he wants some of his own money to invest for retirement, rather than piss it away by contributing to the Social Security ponzi scheme.  So, in closing, the "far right", as you put it, are not much different today than Kennedy democrats of the early 60's. The fact that you think a position advocating strong national defense and support of the military is a "far-right" position, is indeed very telling.

Ask yourself this, Bruce - a question for you both you and your son - would your rather live on your knees a slave, or die a free man, standing?  I choose the latter.  I would choose the same for my sons.
Old age to me is meaningless if it means the values and freedoms you cherish are continually and constantly attacked and destroyed by religious zealots intent on obliterating the US from the face of the earth.  We were attacked, Bruce, by zealots who are repulsed at the audaciousness of a society that allows women the same rights as men, democratic elections, individuality, freedom to worship (or not), etc.
You sound like a reasonble man - no different than most Americans, as we tend to try to be reasonable about things.  But the mindset we are facing with the likes of Bin Laden and his crowd doesn't respond to reason.  Or logic.  Or respect.  They are brainwashed lemmings who actually think that killing themselves with a strap-on bomb and taking out as many innocent men, women and children as they can will get them 72 virgins in paradise.  You think there are options here?  I refer you back to the perceived options in dealing with Hilter in the late 30's.
Many made the the mistake of thinking they could reason with a madman.
We have no options here.  We must seek out and kill or capture every last terrorist and those states that harbor them, or we'll be destroyed.  Harsh words, but these are harsh times.

Erm, Bruce sorry but let me stop you here - the vast majority of these are Iraqi baathists and foreign fighters who want Saddam back.  They don't represent the population as a whole. They don't count. I don't know how many of them are dead, but whatever the number is, its not enough.

The "undeclared" part is a non-sequitur.  Wars do not have to be declared - you only need to look at Clinton's actions in Kosovo to understand this.

Relative to WHAT, Bruce?  I'll ask again - WHAT are you using as a comparison?  Certainly not any actual war or battle we've ever fought before, because if you did, you'd have to admit that the war in Iraq thus far has been wildly successful with fewer casualties than any other war the US military has ever engaged in.  Admit it Bruce - you are a fan of admitting one's mistakes, as you so often have stated in this thread - admit that you are simply using the term "gobs" to exagerrate and inflate your own dislike of this war and the president. When you say things like "gobs" of soldiers are dying, even when it isn't true, it reinforces your own preconceived ideas and agenda about the war.  I would ask that you be honest, Bruce.  The war in Iraq has produced fewer casualties than any other military campaign of its size, depth and breadth in the history of modern warfare.  You may dislike the reasons for the war. You may dislike the commander in chief.  All well and good.  Discuss those reasons and provide evidence to support your assertions and I'll be glad to respond in kind.  But don't be disingenuous in your descriptions of what's actually happening - it does your credibility a huge disservice.

Do you think perhaps the reason we didn't support Ho Chi Minh had something to do with the fact that his idea of "liberating" Vietnam from France was to impose communism upon the country afterward?  We had a choice of who to support in Vietnam and we went with anti-communist

You mentioned it yourself - at the time, the US was scared to death of communism.  I think rightfully so, actually - we'd seen the results of it under Stalin.  We were asked for assistance to prevent Ho Chi Minh from assuming total power of the entire Republic of Vietnam, and we provided it...until the leftwing radicals in this country succeeded in convincing a majority of Americans that a communist state really isn't all that bad.  I mean, Stalin killed some 20 million soviets - what's a few million dead Vietnamese under communist rule?

That whistling sound you hear is my point going straight over your head. Here it is again, more plainly:  The Gulf War, despite what your liberal friends tell you, was not about stealing anyone's oil.  We didn't steal shit.  There were no confiscations of oil fields by the US - not a single one.  You might make the argument that the war was in part about ensuring the free FLOW of oil, as it was quite possible Saddam might have next invaded Saudi Arabia had it not been for the US military establishing its presence - but the larger picture was that both Kuwait and Saudi Arabia were allies of the US, and we had an obligation to assist.  We did.  And we did NOT, repeat NOT steal anyone's oil in the process.

Fast forward to 2003 and Iraq.  Once again the leftist handwringers are sniveling that this a war about "oil" and we're only in Iraq to steal their oil.  Well, we've been there 18 months, and I don't know about you, but I sure as hell am not paying .20 cents a gallon for gas like Iraqis are.  We haven't taken over any oil fields. We haven't stolen any oil.  In fact, quite the opposite - President Bush opposed loaning Iraq money for reconstruction efforts - he wanted simply to give them the funds.  Many politicians wanted to confiscate some Iraqi oil to pay for the war - Bush would have none of it.  So to repeat - first Gulf War - NOT about oil.  Iraq - NOT about oil.  Got it?  Good.  Moving on....

We definitely disagree - you think leadership is a popularity contest. I think leadership is doing the right thing, even if the right thing pisses people off.  I guess we were raised differently.  I certainly don't lose sleep at night over the fact that the our "allies", and I use the term loosely, the French - are once again whining about Americans. When something is right, it is right whether it has popular support or not. You might look to see how Kennedy handled the South's resistance to integration for an example.

Two thoughts here - first, I don't want the government planning for the day when oil is harder to get. That is not the government's job - that is the job of the private sector to do. Second - if you believe it IS the job of the president to plan for oil shortages, than you can you tell us just what, praytell, was Clinton's "plan"? Somehow I managed to miss it.

> There are lots of promising technologies on the > near horizon that, had we been investing in them, would already be > bearing big fruit.

Energy companies and automakers have been researching and investing in alternative sources and forms of energy for decades, and across both democratic and republican presidential administrations. The reason why there's not much fruit being born is that the technology for providing an alternative to internal combustion engines hasn't been invented yet. Yes, we've got some electric cars - they can carry you all of 60 miles on a single charge and if your lucky, you might get up to 40 miles an hour with the wind at your back. Similar with solar - the solar cells you'd need to provide the same energy of a typical fossil-fuel burning car would cover a city block. Hydrogen looks promising, but at the present, it's way too expensive for an average person to afford. Hybrids like the Toyota Prius and the Honda Insight seem to be catching on, but they are 10-20 percent more expensive to buy than a car with a regular engine. I have hope that one day, a clean burning engine will be available at a reasonable price and it will provide the same range and speed as modern combustion engines do. Until this happens, however, I either walk to work (too far) or I have to drive. Most Americans are probably in the same boat as me - if we don't drive to work, we lose our jobs. Ergo, thusly, and therefore, it is in my interest and the interest of most Americans that we continue to seek out oil, preferably our own to reduce dependence on foreign suppliers, and I have absolutely no qualms whatsoever about allowing drilling in Anwar or anywhere else for that matter. The oil drilling technology today leaves little or no environmental impact, we reduce our dependence on foreign oil, and our own costs for gasoline go down. It's a win-win.

> But, fusion and solar and wind and efficient

Good.  Solar and wind energy have proven to be wastes of time and money.  We need to provide for our own energy and I hope President Bush opens up Anwar to drilling....the estimates are that oil from Anwar could reduce our dependence on oil from the Saudis by up to 40%.

I think new energy technology will come - but not from the government.
It will come from entrepreneurs and businesses, just as hyrbid gas/electric cars did.

On our own soil - so ONLY if Bin Laden invades the US would you be willing to fight then, eh?  Nice little "out" you made for yourself there, Bruce - you know good and well that's not how terrorists operate.

What has he lied about?  We're not going back to the WMD's again are we?  I've already explained to you that the president got information from multiple, credible sources, to include sources that were not exactly friendly to the US, that Saddam had WMD's.  The fact that he was wrong about stockpiles of WMD's does not make him a liar - it just makes him wrong.  There's a difference.

Even when he

Yes, I remember the statement very well, because Kerry and liberals attempted to make something out of it, when all the president was saying was that the war on terror is larger than one man.  I hope the president isn't losing sleep over Bin Laden and his capture...we can't let the war be defined as catching one guy.  Frankly, I think if Bin Laden were caught or killed tomorrow, there'd be another terrorist ready to take his place.

> He is a leader, the key one, and it makes sense to banish him.

I agree - after he completes his second term, I say lets never vote for him for president again!

Most of what you just said sounds very Republican.  Maybe I'm rubbing off....

The Saudis were late to the party, but the recent attacks by terrorists on their own citizens have opened their eyes, and they are in the game.
We need to exert pressure on the Saudis to ban the source of a lot of the animus towards the west - the Madrasa/Wahabist schools that dot the country where young Saudis are brainwashed daily by fundamentalist islam-fascist "teachers".

Odds are those are scarce radios, and they're priced for collectors.

The Norelco includes "Blofold's radio in 007 Diamonds are Forever" as part of the description - so Bond fans who just have a license to listen may be willing to pay a premium for it.

It is definitely coming from out west somewhere, and if you can hear it on 3700 at 1800 that is a very positive sign.

No idea here. Though it may get narrowed down soon, I hope!

Pretty hilliarious. It seems like some people are obsessed with reviewing the newest/cheapest portables for whatever reason.
Personally, I like my Grundig Mini World 100. It seems to do the job reasonably enough for using at my work desk.

I think you are being choosy in your stats, citing only the lowest prices recorded to support your argument. I tracked eBay selling prices for DX-394's over a 7-month period from Oct/03 to Apr/04 - graphed at http://groups.yahoo.com/group/RADIOSHACKDX394/files/FAQ/ .The monthly average for unmodified ones ranged from $135-$175; for modified ones, (not solely lowbander's and with varying degrees of mods) from $195-$265. Of course, there were individual ones that sold for less and more than these. That was nearly a year ago and prices may have moved somewhat. My recent eBay watch list shows only one sold in the US for or $110 or less at $108.50. The majority of unmodified ones at around $150. lowbander sold 5 between $235 and $250.

Rather than comparing it against more expensive receivers that rarely show up on ebay and sell at the bottom price you mention (that's too easy!), can you identify a readily available one that is comparable in price with equal or superior features and performance?

Just call it free enterprise -- folks price things the way they want Price too high -- no buyers
Rich folks who collect -- money is no problemo Pretty simple

You wouldn't want price fixing -- or would you ?

READ MY TYPING !!!!  THIS IS WHAT I POSTED ON 12/22 AT 8AM

my original point was that mr lowbander sells his 394's for too high a price and makes it sound like he walks on water modding it. for a little more than he charges ($260) one can get a satellit 800 or a sometimes an R-75 or R-8, far superior radios.

I have an R71A, and I feel the two are very similar in design.

The R71A is great receiver; however my little Icom IC-703 (approx $300 used) which is very portable  has fantastic sensitivity, built-in antenna tuner, draws half-amp on receive.

eham.net has more reviews of the 751A.

I really feel the general coverage receiver in a ham band transceiver is more value for price paid than a standalone receiver.

His review is pretty informative, though. He also wrote (again for Radiointel) an excellent review of the Wellbrook 330S magnetic loop antenna not long ago.

Coastal station operation set for Straight Key Night.

Historic coastal station KPH and the Maritime Radio Historical Society's amateur station K6KPH will once again be on the air on New Year's Eve as part of Straight Key Night 2005. KPH will be on the air with transmissions from dusk to dawn (Pacific time) on the calling frequency of 500kHz and its working frequency of 426kHz. Chief operator Richard Dillman says the group is especially interested in reports of the MF transmissions, and have extended the hours from previous commemorative operations to give more listeners a chance to hear the signals.

Operation will commence on MF about 0100 UTC, employing the station's 5KW Henry Radio transmitter and Marconi T antenna. Announcements will be made on 500kHz and a watch will be kept there. Press, weather, and other information will be sent on 426kHz.

The amateur station will operate on 3545, 7050, and 14050 kHz with other possible frequencies to be announced, all using KPH's vintage HF gear. Ham activity will run from 0000-0600 UTC.

Signal reports and QSLs may be sent to: Ms. Denice Stoops, P.O. Box 381, Bolinas CA 94924-0381.

Straight Key Night is an annual amateur activity that encourages CW exchanges between participants using only straight keys, no "bugs" or electronic keyers. It runs from 0000 to 2400 on UTC date 1 January 2005. More information is available in an ARRL article on SKN. Pictures of KPH and information about the Maritime Radio Historical Society are available at the MHRS site http://www.radiomarine.org/

Scarce but not utra-rare. I got one in good shape on e-bay within the last year or two, with its antennas intact for I think under $100.

It has a very good receiver. I had one some years back and upgraded to the Pro II. I still have my R-71A though - it was my first receiver.

In regard to the 3 volt lithium memory backup battery having a lifespan of 5-7 years in the 751A, 71A etc. (according to Icom web site): I just replaced the backup battery in my R-71A. It was 20 years old and still checked 3.25 volts. The new battery was 3.47 volts. I was worried that the current capacity may diminish with age and cause a sudden failure, but somehow I suspect the battery would have lasted another 20 years.

I checked just now at 2245, and Sam is gone, replaced by some sort of steady noise that sounds like QRM from something like flourescent lights or electronic equipment. But it's the same on all four freqs at the same signal levels as Sam was. I really think it's coming from a military transmitter in VERY rural Solano County, about 15 miles as the crow flies from my location. The transmitter in Yolo County is Coast Guard point to point, while the one in Solano County is attributed variously to the AF or the Navy.

Well, I would take a wild guess and say he is in or near "Yosemite" National Park?
Perhaps it is a remote, solar powered transmitter setup inside a cooler on one of the high peaks. [shrug]

Running dog,
I once took a road trip from Yosemite to Death Valley driving south through Mono and Inyo counties: http://www.dot.ca.gov/hq/roadinfo/do9map.htm
On my left (east) about a mile or so was a huge satellite dish farm.
Do you have any clue as to its purpose?

No need to shout. You are entitled to your opinion but be careful when you state it that you are not slandering lowbander or anyone else. His ebay feedback is 100% positive on over 700 transactions, the majority of which are sales of his modified DX-394's. While he may be guilty of hyperbole (isn't that typical of our advertising oriented society?), can you find a mistruth in his ads? His hundreds of customers are satisfied so his price cannot be too high. I think he is to be congratulated on creating an after-market in souping up DX-394's. Is there such a market for any other receiver?

If your only point was that you can buy a superior radio by spending more money, then I would not argue with you. But, for some, that extra cash is not an option. And to get any of the radios you cited at such a low price is a rarity while there is almost always at least one DX-394 FA on ebay.

This thread, however, (and not necessarily you, Cap'n) demeaned lowbander, his modified DX-394's, and the basic DX-394.
I thought that was unfair and needed some balance. After all, I'm a DX-394 enthusiast and hot-rodder.

I don't know what you are using, Cap'n, but if you can handle a soldering iron, pick up one of those DX-394's at $110 and have some fun. Your other rig, like my Drake R-4B, may end up gathering dust for a while ;-) .

73 and seasons greetings!

Tom

I don't know of any but you might start with the Deutsche Welle Radio site.  If you don't mind listening via the computer you can get lots of info from that site.

http://www.dw-world.de/select http://www.german-way.com/german/christmas2.html  Might be of interest.

http://ingeb.org/catxm.html Has the lyrics to lots of songs.  Some in English and some in German.

I'm not familiar with the high desert. Sorry. I rarely go to LA, and I've never been through most of the desert, including Highway 395.

I'm only 120 miles or so from Yosemite by road, and much shorter as the crow flies. The local TV stations in Sacramento regularly give temperature forecasts for the Yosemite area.

BBC's The World Today at 0300 December 24 had a segment on Iraqis returning to Fallujah, or rather Iraqis NOT returning to Fallujah because only a small fraction of the Fallujans that were expected to show up for re-entry actually did. Apparently they're not coming back because the city is a total ruin and there is nothing to return to. Plus America is still fighting insurgents there. Also in the same segment was an interview with an Iraqi woman. I didn't catch all of it because of QRM (see below) but she said that everything has gotten worse since America toppled Saddam and that the only way that things will get better is for America (and Britain, and the rest of the "coalition") to leave. If this person represents the majority of Iraqis then Iraq is truly a lost cause. She kept referring to Americans as occupiers and repeatedly said that Iraqis have a right to fight the occupation of their country. She also said that all the breadwinners of Iraqi families are being killed by the Americans. The Iraqis don't want us to be in their country, the infrastructure and quality of life keeps deteriorating for them, and the more it deteriorates the more of them will fight the occupiers. So why are we still there, Mr. President? Hm? Because you can't admit that you made a BIG mistake? Because you don't actually listen to shortwave, or watch TV news or even read the newspapers, thus getting your information about the world only from your handpicked yes men and therefore don't know what's really happening?

By the way, BBC's signal on 9525 khz was repeatedly being interfered with by a Spanish speaking broadcast, which occasionally overwhelmed the Beeb, thus making it hard to follow the news. At one point I heard the words "Cuba independiente y democratica" leading me to think that it was a broadcast of a Cuban rebel group ("Cuba Independiente Y Democratica" is one of the many anti-Castro groups in Miami). Such broadcasts are regularly carried by WRMI, but WRMI doesn't have a signal anywhere near 9525. The BBC broadcasts Spanish from Delano, CA on 9515 at 0300, but it would have to be awful strong to splatter 10 khz. Any ideas?

Yep, I got an idea. The BBC is biased and full of shit! That's why even the British troops decided to turn it off. Get a frickin clue.

By the way, Kerry LOST!

Get over it.

WASHINGTON (CNN) -- An unauthorized radio station in the nation's capital called for "massive protests" in the week leading up to the January 20 presidential inauguration.

The station broadcast Wednesday at 1680 AM and identified itself as "Guerrilla Radio, WSQT."

During the identification message, an announcer said, "WSQT is a project of urban activists in the D.C. area working on housing issues, homeless issues, issues of war, issues of occupation both at home and abroad, and issues of the environment that we all have to live in."

As to your splatter... you need a better filter in your radio.

The quick answer here, buttfuck, is that the easiest way for us to leave is if the Iraqi's behave... pretty simple isn't it, buttfuck?

One would think that the Iraqi's feel the same way, right, buttfuck?

However, the terrorist elements do not feel that way, buttfuck.

Get a fucking clue, buttfuck.

Don't make me tell you again, buttfuck.

Damn, those frickin manufacturers of portables have certainly dealt this hobby a terrible blow.

I'm using a Degen 1102, so it's not the best of the best, and I don't expect much from it, but this is the first time that I've had this problem on this freq. And before you start calling me a tard, I DO have a Yaesu FRG-8800 for serious listening, but I'm in a situation where I can't put up an outside antenna. Hopefully this situation will change in the next few months.

Most pirates use FM transmitters. Having been in the pirate community (but not as a broadcaster) I know that FM tx's are easier to make and more concealable than AM ones. So the fact that they're broadcasting on MW is somewhat of a surprise.

Why do you think they're booting him out of the Forces? Getting caught so many times in flagrante delicto, they HAD to do something. Not only were the optics bad, but the soldiers were starting to complain of the weird tasting mashed potatoes and all the short hairs in the pastry dough.

Also, please refrain from using the word 'innuendo'. He misinterprets it as something second personally anal, causing him unwarranted arousal.

Yeah, that's right, buttfuck... the intelligence gathering capabilities of the United States of America could never compete with those shortwave stations, the TV news or those newspapers...

The President of The United States of America gets a daily briefing of what is going on around the world that puts the news that the fucking BBC puts out to shame.

Get a frickin clue, buttfuck.

And yes, I do now consider you a fucking 'tard... you earned it!

Yet another rousing speech from dxAce. The brain food is working well.

Why the fragmented swastika in the pictures? Don't they remember how join the four pieces properly?

Actually, there's several "revolutionary socialist" groups out there, each with its own agenda and own following (small no doubt, but a following). It's been a while since I've been involved in "revolutionary" activities, so I can't remember them all, but in addition to the WWP there's the International Socialists (their signs are ALWAYS recognizable at demonstrations once you know what typeface to look for), the Revolutionary Communist Party (they're Maoists), and the Spartacists, a group that's so weird even the other socialists call it a cult. And that's just the beginning. We're talking about people who answer their phones with the last two digits of the phone number, supposedly to distract the secret police (like that wouldn't ATTRACT attention when everybody else on the planet says "hello" when answering the phone). They generally act like they're in pre-1917 Russia. They each have their own newspaper, and reps of each can be found at any demonstration hawking their respective propaganda. Their delusions of grandeur can be quite funny even if you tend to be on the liberal side of things. By the way, the WWP groups like ANSWER and National People's Campaign tend to identify themselves as such; the Guerrilla Radio pirate could be another splinter group of the WWP or another one of the socialist groups or even a totally new, unaffiliated organization.

To my delight, I received a Grundig AM/FM/SW radio for Christmas.  I have been wanting a radio like this for some time.  Now what I need to do is construct an external loop antenna because I will be using the radio in my office and I need to get better reception. The best I can do is locate the antenna inside the building. Can anyone give me information or steer me to a good website for loop antenna plans? I'm really most interested in the medium wave band to 120m band area.

Steve Quayle mentioned it last night and also mentioned something we in the U.S. might be interested in.  It had something to do with a study that when there is a really big one THERE IS SOMETIMES ANOTHER LARGE ONE 180 DEGREES FROM IT -- STRAIGHT THROUGH THE EARTH.  This would put it in the general direction of the U.S. ? west coast?

Oh, this was PREDICTED THE DAY BEFORE by Stan Deyo.  He predicted it in the next 2 to 5 days and it came the next day! I think this may be recorded on Steve's site http://www.stevequayle.com  Seems it was about an 8.1.

Hello,

Having "played" with a friend's heavily modified ICOM IC-R75, I believe this radio is also a "defective" design and is, in fact, a fraud (my opinion).

It appears, at least to me, to be a "bottomless modification pit" costing enough money (and aggravation and disappointment) to make it well worthwhile to just forget about this "Japanese wonder" and buy the Grundig Satellit 800 which costs $449.95 or less. No expensive or inconvenient modifications are necessary for the Grundig! And, it gives at least 95% of the performance of a Drake R8B or AOR AR7030 Plus at only one-third the price.

My friend likes his radio; however, I've commented to him that if he likes it so much, why does he have to keep modifying it? His radio has cost him, thus far, over $1000. (And, he's not a "nut." His concerns with the performance of his radio are well-founded.) For that kind of money, you could buy a Drake or an AOR.

If ICOM were truly a class act, again in my opinion, they would upgrade the 'R75 as its shortcomings are well-known by now, and they should even offer to arrange "fixes" for those radios already in service.
Best,

Joe

Whole Wheat Radio is an unpretentious, interactive, independent music world community.  The webcast originates from a cramped 12x12 cabin in Talkeetna, Alaska.  It's as close to Northern Exposure's funky radio station as you can get.  (Yup, there's a moose that hangs around the cabin.  And an adorable monkey too.)  They broadcast 24 hours/day, 7 days/week, 365 days/year with the help of tireless DJs - human and otherwise.  They've been on-the-air since August of 2002 and have served up well over a million individual 'listens' to independent musicians' tunes.

Why not just a petition with a lot of names? With all the R75 and R5 owners?

What happened to the broadcast from Turkey on 9460 kHz that was widely heard in the US? This afternoon I heard R. Slovakia on that freq in Spanish.

Hi,

I mentioned the Bridgeport, CT station because it was the first station I had to struggle to get. I knew after I heard the WICC call sign that I was hooked! The farthest station I've received is WHAS from Louisville, KY (995 Miles or so). WHAS came in almost as clear as a local signal.

I've noticed that Vermont is absent from my logs so I'm working on that right now. I'm not sure what to shoot for in VT yet. I'm also having some difficulty IDing Canadian stations that broadcast in French.

I checked out the NRC Web page, and I've just joined their AM list which is pretty neat. I've also ordered their "AM Radio Log", so that should help. I won't need the computer on with a good reference book.

I'm looking forward to picking up a signal or two from Europe or N. Africa!

Merry Christmas,
M.

Your opinion would carry more weight if you use the appropriate apostrophe when making that statement.

Considering the documented torture at Abu Ghraib prison-which was a notorious torture chamber under Saddam-and all the other things that the Americans have done to them, why WOULDN'T they think that Bush is just a white skinned Saddam in a cowboy hat?

In fact, she said basically this same point over and over again. There was no mistaking her intent, even with all the interference. Like I said, if her opinion is shared by the majority of Iraqis, then Iraq is a lost cause, and we might as well cut and run. Unfortunately for America, when John Kerry proposed this, he was soundly defeated at the polls because of the cowboy "America never cuts and runs" mentality fostered by his opponent. Even when cutting and running would be the best course of action, Americans are too proud-or too stupid, or both-to do it. Remember what the Bible said: Pride goes before a fall.

I think that it's the conservatives who keep screaming "liberal tard" whenever more bad news comes out on Iraq. They don't want to face reality. The reality is that the Iraqis that we're training to fight for us are using their position to kill us-the bomber was a member of the Iraqi National Guard. We can't trust any Iraqi, and if we can't even be safe on our bases, then what's the point in sticking around?

Unless the damage is bad enough that nothing is working in that region or country.  For example the Maldives highest point is 2 m (6 feet for the metrically challenged) above sea level.   That'd be a bad place to get hit by a tsunami.

Who is this fellow begging for money here? He wants his church to pay one million dollars a month to help him out or something.
This doesn't show up in any of the sites that keep track of frequencies. It is coming in loud and queer though.

Merry Christmas DXers! :-)

Y'know, when ICOM does well, they usually do VERY well.  When they do poorly, they produce the R1 and the R75.

Unfortunately, one thing they always do is handle criticism very poorly.  Especially ICOM America.

I wonder if Mr. Inoue (sp!) knows what is being done in his name over here?

Don't worry about when ILG will be updated.  There are many other databases and lists out there that provide equivalent information:

Prime Time Shortwave - http://www.primetimeshortwave.com/
EiBi - http://www.eibi.de.vu/FCC HF Seasonal Operating Schedules - http://www.fcc.gov/ib/sand/neg/hf_web/seasons.html
HFCC - http://www.hfcc.org/

Most of these frequency lists are available in database formats.  The EiBi schedules are fairly hard to parse, but all the others are straightforward.

I highly recommend the Prime Time Shortwave database.  The author, Daniel Sampson, does a great job and keeps putting out updates every week or two.

Icom radios will cost more now, and their still junk. Look inside an Icom and it looks like the inside of a Chinese-made $39.95 Radio Shack DVD player.

..and let's not forget the great Icom fiasco of some years ago (1980's) when Icom deliberately made microprocessor controlled radios for both ham and swl which had their internal CPU operating system written into volatile DRAM as a cost cutting measure. (!)

Your radio's lithium cell aged and went bad or got bumped lose in the mobile and your radio then promptly D I E D.  You could have it "repaired" of course by sending it off to Icom with a check for $65.00 to have it "re-programmed".

In ham radio circles this became know as the "Icom Time Bomb Rig", and their sales of course promptly dropped thru the floor faster than a lead-filled baloon falling into a interstellar black hole.

They may have fixed this gaffe long ago, but Icom still builds radios much like Pakesheesh Patel's family, what owns the Subway Sandwich shop, builds their hoagies....slapped together with no condiments (extra charge, much like Icom accessories) and dry.

Buy a Yaesu instead.

A much more advanced radio all around.

What am I hearing?  According to most R75 owners, it's the best receiver on the planet and with only a few hundred small Kiwa mods, is superior to the R-390.  Is this not true?

And of course, ICOM wasn't taken to court.  They took a company to court for not paying for radios it bought from ICOM.

I still don't see what purpose the original poster had in posting this here, and anybody who fell into the trap of "someone won against ICOM, we can bring suit too" didn't pay attention themselves.

Perhaps they modify ham gear that covers 160 meters .... it's a move of 120 KHz and I'd bet there are transceivers out there that can still put out a clean signal.  The antenna would have to be an incredibly large compromise  of size/performance so as to not attract too much attention 8-}

Well, if you really want to play that way, 'tard boy, I don't really remember

Violkswagen (Europe) and Mercedes-Benz of Europe and some South America will fit you with a shortwave radio in their new cars, however as there is no "market" for the same at present in the USA, the same is not available except by special order. (there is a Volkswagen dealer I know of in the Wash DC area which will special-order a VW OEM radio with shortwave from Europe and install the same, however be prepared to pay almost $1300.00) It's special-ordered from the factory in Germany and normally available in Europe-market models only, leadtime is 4 weeks.

Seems to be popular with Diplomatic and Legation Cars at Embassy service in the DC area.

The only people who are insane are the abject FOOLS who would pay such a price range for that China-made junk.  Oh well, some sucker reading the WSJ, Smithsonian or some other "high end" magazine may be snookered into paying such a ridiculous price but we here in r.r.s. know better !!

Even the American media admits that things have gotten out of control in Iraq. The last known report from Time magazine's correspondent said that he was pinned down by mortar fire and ringed by "kidnap teams" waiting to kidnap him if he left his compound. He said that the US military has lost control of the entire country.

As for the CIA, it's run by befuddled bureaucrats. We don't know anything about this Ansar Al Sunna group that bombed the Mosul base because we haven't infiltrated them. We still don't have any spies in Al Qaeda three years after 9-11. And lest we forget the CIA's biggest failure-the fact that it knew everything there was to know about the USSR except the fact that it was nearing total collapse of all its institutions. When the whole rotten mess imploded, the CIA was caught flatfooted. They had no clue; they thought that the USSR of 1989 was the same formidable foe it had been in 1957. The CIA had no clue that 9-11 was coming. No clue that there were no WMD in Iraq, or that Saddam hadn't been a threat to the world for quite some time. The CIA has utterly failed us, and will keep doing so unless we junk it and rebuild intelligence gathering from the ground up.

The conservatives can't handle the truth, and it will cost us all in the long run.

I should admit something-Steve's insults have inspired me to dust off the Yaesu and hook a wire to it and see what I can pick up. I'll do that tomorrow.

Cuhulin was ranting about terrorists - and Johnps1964's reply was to comment he couldn't play nice.

Playing nice with terrorists is a marvelously bad idea.

Reminds me of Dr. Stark in the movie "Naked Space".

That may be the ONLY good his insults have ever done.

What Yaesu is it? I have an FRG7 and FRG9600

Both are fine, but the CW light doesn't work on the 9600.

My all time favourite movie Doctor was Peter Sellers in Dr. Strangelove. I get a bad feeling about the future every time I think of it, though. I'm starting to see Bush's face going down with the bomb. Yeehaa!

Bush DID say Iraq was won. That's what VICTORY means. Why are being a revisionist?

Hi All,
 I  live in New Zealand and it has not caused any disruption at all.
Although it was a big quake it was very deep and some distance from here. It has made our National TV news but has not ranked very high in the news.

The Klingenfuss database cannot be integrated with any other program.  Not only is the database encrypted, it also uses a proprietary Btrieve database, which does not have freely available ODBC or OLE DB connectors.  So even if you could decrypt the data, which would possibly be illegal under the DCMA, you'd need to purchase data connectors to get to the data.

The software lets you copy one record at a time into the Windows clipboard. That's it.

Ditto. I have found good performance on SW, MW and FM without using an external antenna. The audio is quite good for its size. I think it's WELL worth the price! Even the tuning knob works well on mine. I've paid $200 or more for Sangean/RS models where the tuning via the knob was PATHETIC. If you haven't tried an 1103 don't knock it : )

WMR (World Music Radio) is on the air right now (Friday 1230 UTC) and until Monday morning 0700 UTC. The frequency is 5815 kHz - and power is 5 kW.

Reception of WMR is possible in large parts of Europe during daytime. The deep winter seasons means that reception close to the transmitter site in Denmark becomes poor after sunset. However reception in Southern Europe should be all right in the evening hours.

Reception overseas is sporadic but sometimes possible in the Americas after 22 UTC. From Africa, Asia and Pacific we haven't received any reports recently.

This was e-mailed to me this morning by Oris Grim an old friend.
-----------------------------------------------------------

I happened to be traveling through Huntsville, Alabama early this morning, I decided to stop in Athens and see just how tough Lloyd Davies was going to act when he saw me in person.

Many of you know that a few years ago, Lloyd got smart with several people in the Deja Newsgroup (now Google) and I issued a challenge to him. I told him I would be attending the Dalton, Ga. Hamfest if he wanted to continue the conversation. He said he would be there and he was going to kick my ass.

Well, Lloyd was a no-show and continued the verbal assault on the newsgroups. He always talks tough behind his keyboard. And, I understand he is now doing the same sort of thing on the NIM Busters Board.

Well, about 8.35 this morning (December 23, 2004) I located his apartment in a nasty looking section of town. I'm a pretty good sized man, but I put my gun in my back waistband after exiting the car. I located his apartment and knocked on the door. The doorbell was missing and bare wires were sticking out of the wall. I heard someone say I'm coming and shortly the door opened with a safety chain lock still engaged. He asked what I wanted and I introduced myself and asked if we could have a conversation. He turned white as a sheet and attempted to slam the door, but I already had a foot wedged in the opening. He started shaking uncontrollably and was shouting leave me alone, leave me alone! I told him he didn't seem so tough now face to face and then noticed a putrid odor of urine and he was pissing his pants and crying like a baby. Please leave me alone Oris he said, I was just having fun and meant no harm, please leave, please. I could see the filthy floor of this apartment and the dirty floors and the stench of a grown man pissing on himself were almost enough to make me want to vomit, and I don't have a queasy stomach. Upon telling him that this time he would escape a ass kicking and not to ever get a smart mouth with me again and a verbal yes from him, I departed. That apartment complex looked like a crackhouse, niggers everywhere, filthy grounds and stairwells. Junk cars everywhere and garbage overflowing the garbage cans.

This Lloyd is nothing more than white trash that delivers pizzas and could afford to take a trip out of town if the ticket cost $5.00.

I'm sending this to a friend who despises Lloyd Davies and he wanted to post it for everyone to see just what kind of chickenshit asshole this Davies really is.

Used attenuator to see if the 10100 kHz signal was a spur - it was not.

I sent a message to WWRB about the strong second harmonic, which had not been heard previously.

SB PROP ARL ARLP053
ARLP053 Propagation de K7RA

After passing the longest night of the year, the northern hemisphere will have gradually increasing sunlight over the next six months. These seasonal variations have a big effect impact on propagation. As an example, using a popular propagation program to calculate a path from Seattle to Cleveland on December 22 with a sunspot number of 35 (average value for December 20-22), I looked at a projection for the 30 meter band. 30 meters should open toward Ohio around 8:00 AM Seattle time, around Seattle's sunrise. Expected signals should be good until sunset, when signals jump higher by 10-20 db. Then the chance of an opening stays low most of the night. From sunrise to sunset is 8 hours and 20 minutes.

Running the same values two months later, there are nearly two more hours of sunlight at the Seattle end. 30 meters looks good to Cleveland most times of the day and night, except for a low probability of an opening from after midnight until sunrise at the Seattle end.

Los Angeles sits in much more sunlight than Seattle in the dead of winter, with almost 10 hours from sunrise to sunset on the solstice. On December 22 the 30 meter path to Cleveland is open most hours of the day and night. The possibility of an opening drops during the hours of 6-9 PM LA time, and again from 2-5 AM. On February 22, LA sees over 11 hours from sunrise to sunset, and 30 meters should be open to Cleveland with strong signals at any time, except for a brief period with lower chance of an opening just before LA sunrise.

Jack Bock, K7ZR (SK) used to write about the ''Sufferin' Sevens'' in the Totem Tabloid, the newsletter for the Western Washington DX Club. He was referring to hams in Washington state and probably KL7, not Arizona. Having more light really does help.

For the past week, sunspot numbers were up and the A index was lower when compared to the previous week. Average daily sunspot numbers and solar flux values rose over 5 points, and the mid-latitude A index was down over two points.

For the next week, daily sunspot numbers should be moderately higher and solar flux should stay above 100 until the last day of the year. At that time, we can look at the average sunspot numbers for 2004, and compare them with previous years. Right now it looks like the average daily sunspot number for 2004 will come in about 40 points lower than 2003 and over 100 points lower than 2002.

For more information concerning propagation and an explanation of the numbers used in this bulletin see the ARRL Technical Information Service propagation page at http://www.arrl.org/tis/info/propagation.html.

Sunspot numbers for December 16 through 22 were 14, 40, 40, 29, 30, 25 and 47 with a mean of 32.1. 10.7 cm flux was 90, 89.9, 90.6, 94,

93.9, 101 and 98.8, with a mean of 94.  Estimated planetary A indices were 10, 15, 12, 4, 4, 12 and 19 with a mean of 10.9.
Estimated mid-latitude A indices were 8, 9, 8, 1, 2, 6 and 12, with a mean of 6.6.

Having heard the report in question - all of it - I can say he got the salient points.  The young woman (who was quite articulate and intelligent sounding) said basically that Iraqis were glad Saddam was gone but they didn't want the Americans to rule in his place.  And it was time - past time - for them to GO.

And if they wouldn't leave willingly, then Iraqis have the right to kill them until they left.  And that's what they're doing.

The BBC seldom has good news to report about events in Iraq.
Depending on your ideological bend, that's either because they're liberal sops or because there's little good news to report...

I just know that Santa will bring me my Knight Star Roamer this year.  Been waiting since 1967.

I can just smell the aroma of burning solder flux.  I hope that Allied prestripped and tinned all the wires to their exact length.  I can hardly wait to mount last component on the chassis and listen to stations through the thick 120 cycle hum of the half-wave power supply.  I just know that if I do a real good alignment on the radio, the set will be sensitive up to 30MHz even though it has no RF amplifier.  My code key is ready so I can practice Morse when I crank up the Sensitivity control so the IF starts oscillating.

If not a Star Roamer....maybe a Span Master will do.

Thanks Santa!  I'll leave a couple of 807's for you on the table.

Did Saddam mimic Saladin?
November 8th, 2004

The weird ease with which the Iraqi army and regime fell last year, combined with the stubbornness of the subsequent insurgency, has occasioned lively debate in national security circles. Here's one hypothesis: The Iraqi dictator, taking his cue from Islamic history, deliberately lured the coalition into Iraq. Realizing that his enfeebled army couldn't stand against the U.S.-led coalition in conventional terms, he feigned defeat, ordering his henchmen to arm themselves and carry on the struggle by unconventional means.

A protracted war, reckoned Saddam, would wear down America's will to fight, allowing him to win politically despite being thrashed on the battlefield. Rather than go down fighting, the regime melted away and, perhaps in concert with foreign terrorists, commenced the insurgency that has bedeviled the pacification effort ever since.

Fanciful? In reality, such a strategy would be fully in keeping with the Muslim way of war. Ever since the Crusades, Islamic commanders have favored using light forces to harry more heavily armed Western armies. Muslim armies would often feign retreat, enticing their enemies into pursuing them. Having wearied their foes, they would envelop them and counterattack at an auspicious moment. Steeped in conventional war, the United States needs to come to terms with this distinctively Eastern brand of warfare.

There's ample reason to believe that Saddam knew about traditional Muslim strategies. Throughout the 1990s, Saddam chafed under the Desert Storm ceasefire terms, especially the UN-imposed sanctions and weapons inspections. In an attempt to slip these bonds, he sought to rally the Arab peoples to the Iraqi banner. He cast about for a symbol that would appeal to Arabs' memories of past glory.

He hit upon Saladin, the gallant 12th-century Kurdish general who had evicted Christian forces from Jerusalem and later fought armies led by Richard the Lion-Hearted to a standstill.

Rhetoric and political imagery linking the 20th Century despot with the 12th Century hero were ubiquitous. In Tikrit, the family seat of both men, a statue of a mounted, mailed Hussein conjured up memories of Saladin. So did similarly garbed statues adorning the dictator's Republican Palaces. A book published by an official press styled Saddam "Saladin II," while postage stamps showed the two men side-by-side.

Why Saladin? Two reasons stand out. First, the Kurdish champion had been the most powerful potentate of his day, uniting much of the Arab world under his leadership. Second, he had conquered Jerusalem, setting himself apart from other Arab heroes of antiquity. Saladin thus fit nicely into Saddam's diplomacy, which for years had been premised on real and threatened attacks on Israel.

But Saddam Hussein may also have taken his cue from Saladin in military matters. A master tactician, Saladin was skilled at using light cavalrymen to harass, tire out, and ultimately overcome armored Western knights. The feigned retreat was part of his battlefield lexicon. Indeed, as a young man, Saladin had distinguished himself by leading a feigned retreat and a victorious counterattack at the Battle of Ashmunein.

In 1191, during the Third Crusade, Saladin attempted the same feat against an army led by Richard the Lion-Hearted, near the coastal town of Arsuf. Schooled in Muslim tactics, the wily King Richard refused to take the bait. In a rare display of discipline, the Christian horsemen remained on the field of battle, allowing the battered Muslim army to take flight. There was no foolhardy pursuit.

What of Saddam? The Iraqi dictator was famously contemptuous of America's staying power in wartime, largely because--he believed--its leadership was vulnerable to premature war-weariness among the electorate. Not the physical burden of heavy arms and armor but political weakness, in the form of dissension among the American people and their elites, would eventually tire out the United States. It would quit the campaign, as it had in Vietnam, Lebanon, and Somalia.

A prolonged insurgency would sap America's will, allowing Saddam's regime to prevail politically. It would regain power despite battlefield defeat.

If the speculation presented here is true, then, Iraq's Baathist regime replicated Saladin's strategy on a grand scale, ensnaring the U.S.-led coalition in a protracted guerrilla war which, if Saddam calculated correctly, the West lacked the stomach to win. The Iraqi tyrant seems to have erred in this regard, if last week's presidential election is any guide. A majority of Americans declined to turn President George W. Bush out of office over his handling of the Iraq war.

Even so, the United States could encounter similar strategies in the war on terror. If Saddam followed Saladin's lead, and if future antagonists do so, the U.S. military should follow that of King Richard. It should decline to fight on enemy terms. Honing its proficiency in counterinsurgent strategy, police duty, and postwar reconstruction would be a good start.

Who are you trying to convince?  Me, or you.

XM=3 million subs

Sirius=1 million subs

(DirecTV has 14 million subs and still loses money, while DiSH has almost 10 and pays quarterly dividends.  Go figure.)

What if you're a Saints fan and not within range of WWL?

The audio quality can be fairly sucky, but not usually.

Where I live, I have a choice between AM hate radio, the Cal State Northridge too-poor-for-NPR station on FM, weak HF (inless you want to listen to Japan, Korea or China the shortwave here is very DXer grade at best), or 220 channels of crystal clear satellite radio.

If you listen to HF Broadcast for the content, Sirius has WRN 24/7.

--------------------------------------------------------------------------------

And who was the ass hole that single handedly gutted the CIA???
It was good ole Bill Clinton. Who was it that "first" said Iraq had WMD's?
It was good ole Bill Clinton, along with John Kerry chiming in right behind him. You libs need to get to the original source of things before you come out with these dumb ass statements like the above. You make yourselves look like fools.  Who was in office the First time the WTC was bombed?? and did "nothing" about it??? I'll refresh your memory, it was Bill Clinton.
Who was in office when the USS Cole was nearly sank by the same group of people, and did NOTHING about it??.  It was Bill Clinton.
Who was in the oval office when the military was gutted with many base closings??? It was Bill Clinton.  Who saw to it that the Chinese were able to steal the technology of our W 31 missile targeting secrets??
It was Bill Clinton,,,, no doubt for a huge campaign contributuions. Shall I go on and on????  Bill Clinton flushed this country right down the toilet, for his own personal gain.  Oh and who was it again that was getting his knob polished by a young intern in the Oval Office while foreign dignitaries were waiting??? Yep good ole BC. He was a great guy wasnt he????
Before you start blaming Bush for "everything" you better take a long hard look at recent history and see what "Your" guy said about the same things,,, otherwise you look like a pack of fools.  At least Bush had the balls to do something about the fucking mess he inherited from "your"
"fearless" leader.  Why do you think the ragheads had the balls to do what they did?????????   because they thought the U.S. Would Not do anything about it,,,, as in the past with good ole Bill Clinton.
Oh and then there was Mogadishu,,,,, who was our fearless leader for that cluster fuck????  why it was good ole boy Bill Clinton again.....
See a pattern here????????.. Is it really any wonder why we were attacked???

Hi,

Happy holiday to all.

Anyone have any idea when ILG will (probably) post the B04 schedule for sw listeners ?
Tried, but they're not responsive with e-mails.

I guess B04 schedules are in use now by stations; right ?

I can watch bbc on my DirecTV tv set but I rarely do because I have long known bbc is bi-assed and that isn't Shortwave either.I reckon I better get the lead out and do my Christmas shopping today.I have always been a last minute shopper.Hey,my nephew is going to give me his 1974 (I think it's a 1974 model car,it really is a nice car though and it's in great condition too) Ford LTD car for free.(never look a gift horse in the mouth!) My sister's daughter bought a new Honda van and her daughter let my sister have her 2000 model Honda van and my sister is going to let her son have her 1996 Ford Windstar van.Merry Christmas and Happy New Year folks.

Yes, the B04 season started at the end of October. I have no idea when the ILG will be out.

Replt To - RANDY,
Thank You for the "TIP"

So Eton Corp. is talking and the word is that the Eton E1 XM Radio will be 'out' Mid January 2005.
It is interesting that the Price will be about =3DEqual=3D to the Grundig Satellit 800 Millennium Radio.
The 'original' MSRP for the Grundig Satellit 800 M Radio.
was IIRC $699.95 and is now generally priced at $499.95.
Currently Universal Radio has the Grundig Satellit 800 M
Radio "On Sale" at $449.95.
Per the Universal-Radio.Com WebSite
http://www.universal-radio.com/catalog/portable/0101.html
"This new model is expected February 2005.
We will post the price as soon as available."

P R I C E - ABOUT THE MSRP AN WHAT YOU CAN EXPECT TO PAY:
I would suspect that the Eton E1 XM Radio will have the $699.95 MSRP and that for the first few months that they will be sold at the Full MSRP of $699.95 until the fall off in 'demand' at that Price-Point warrants a Big "Price Discount" by the Retailers and OnLine Merchants.

Don't be fooled by Gene Scott, Rev. Bob Dobbs is the one messiah!

A bizarre minister isn't he? When I lived in Los Angeles in my early 20's we used to call his 800 number to *uck with him, but then they initiated call screening and when we bypassed that if you didn't give the password identifying yourself as a "Kings House" (the apparent mindless drones who follow him) they hung up immediately

Shortwave is the PERFECT outlet for Dr. Scott, he's rated just below point to point facimile for content.

My only thought is, feed it with balanced line and take the time to investigate a balanced line tuner, for reception only you can make one quite easily, you can significantly null noise sources (at times) and I think for 120m it would enhance the performance.

Now what I need to do is construct an external loop antenna because I will be using the radio in my office and I need to get better reception.  The best I can do is locate the antenna inside the building.  Can anyone give me information or steer me to a good website for loop antenna plans?  I'm really most interested in the medium wave band to 120m band area.

Thanks for being Exhibit A in my argument. The mindless American mindset of "America always wins, no matter what it takes, no matter what the situation" is a double edged sword. On one hand it shows that we have what it takes to take on a foe like Al Qaeda that has a centuries long view of jihad. But it can prevent Americans from realizing that a certain situation is hopeless, no matter what we do. The situation in Iraq is hopeless. The more we turn the country into a police state, the more the Iraqis see us as having replaced one dictator with another, except the American dictator is a handful of faceless capitalists in New York bent on creating a neoconservative far right wing dictatorship that will allow American oil companies to take all the oil they want and not give Iraqis a dime of the big profits. Osama's chief complaint against America, as ennumerated in a tape released just a few days ago, is that it steals Muslim oil and keeps the oil money to itself and its corrupt cronies. And America proves him right in his view every day it is in Iraq. The original plan to rebuild Iraq had the country totally controlled by Americans. Saudi Arabia is totally controlled by Americans, through their intermediaries the Saudi Royal Family. And we use the country as a filling station and keep the profits while the average Saudi falls deeper into poverty. Iraqis look at Saudi Arabia and say, is this what we want the Americans to make us? And then America acts surprised when the Iraqis say no. Call me a liberal tard all you want, I don't give a flying fuck because I know more about this than the average American conservative/mindless Bush lapdog. The Iraqis are fighting us so fiercely because they know that Bush does not want democracy for Iraq. Bush wants another Saudi Arabia, where the American controlled crony class builds palaces amid decaying concrete hovels, where the people are kept in ignorance so they won't revolt.

Heh.  Cast "summon phil spell" roll...

I was an R75 owner.  Great value?  Yep.  Very good performer?  You bet.  Without terrible weaknesses?  Nope.

That said, I own several R8500s and think they are terribly underrated by the radio community.  I certainly prefer them to the '75.

Funny... if I look inside my '8500 I see a cast aluminum, compartmentalized, shielded chassis.

Much as I like my Yaesu gear, their last great receiver was the FRG-100.

But, whatever.  If you want a religious war, find someone else.  I just like gear that works.

I have an FRG-8800, and my only complaint is that power surges or fluctuations (such as can happen during a power outage) can scramble the microprocessors. I remedy this by keeping it plugged into a surge protector that I turn off when the radio is not in use. Other than that, it is wonderful for 20 year old technology.

I wanted one. They were probably way underrated. I'd like to find a good comparison between it, FRG 7 and FRG 9600 (Digital displays notwithstanding). There was some old stock last year at one of hte Canadian dealers, but I don't know if they still have any. Price was around 8 to 900 dollars.

Someday you will realize that we were right. Unfortunately, by then your head will be in the process of being severed from your body by some jihadist after the terrorists have taken over the world. Or you will think about it in between praying seven times a day and caring for your three foot long beard. Either way, you will consider what I have to say. I'm confident of it.

Awww C'Mon why pick on Lloyd Davies ? I don't share his political views but he's 30 some years old and delivering pizzas. He does get a bit mouthy at times but maybe he's got a problem or two. I've got some of my own. Live and let live, especially on Christmas day.

Merry Christmas to all, or if that offends you Happy Holidays. :)

BAGHDAD, December 19, 2004 (IPS/GIN)-The U.S. military has used poison gas and other non-conventional weapons against civilians in Fallujah, eyewitnesses report.

"Poisonous gases have been used in Fallujah," 35-year-old trader from Fallujah, Abu Hammad, told IPS. "They used everything-tanks, artillery, infantry, poison gas. Fallujah has been bombed to the ground."

Mr. Hammad is from the Julan district of Fallujah, where some of the heaviest fighting occurred. Other residents of that area report the use of illegal weapons.

"They used these weird bombs that put up smoke like a mushroom cloud," Abu Sabah, another Fallujah refugee from the Julan area, told IPS. "Then small pieces fall from the air with long tails of smoke behind them."

He said pieces of these bombs exploded into large fires that burnt the skin even when water was thrown on the burns. Phosphorous weapons, as well as napalm, are known to cause such effects. "People suffered so much from these," he said.

Macabre accounts of killing of civilians are emerging through the cordon U.S. forces are still maintaining around Fallujah.

"Doctors in Fallujah are reporting to me that there are patients in the hospital there who were forced out by the Americans," said Mehdi Abdulla, a 33-year-old ambulance driver at a hospital in Baghdad. "Some doctors there told me they had a major operation going, but the soldiers took the doctors away and left the patient to die."

Kassem Mohammed Ahmed who recently escaped from Fallujah told IPS he witnessed many atrocities committed by U.S. soldiers in the city.

"I watched them roll over wounded people in the street with tanks," he said. "This happened so many times."

Abdul Razaq Ismail, who also escaped from Fallujah, said soldiers had used tanks to pull bodies to the soccer stadium to be buried. "I saw dead bodies on the ground and nobody could bury them because of the American snipers," he said. "The Americans were dropping some of the bodies into the Euphrates near Fallujah."

Mr. Hammad said he saw people attempt to swim across the Euphrates to escape the siege. "The Americans shot them with rifles from the shore," he said. "Even if some of them were holding a white flag or white clothes over their heads to show they are not fighters, they were all shot."

He said he had seen elderly women carrying white flags shot by U.S.

soldiers. "Even the wounded people were killed. The Americans made announcements for people to come to one mosque if they wanted to leave Fallujah, and even the people who went there carrying white flags were killed."

Another Fallujah resident, Khalil (40), told IPS he saw civilians shot as they held up makeshift white flags. "They shot women and old men in the streets," he said. "Then, they shot anyone who tried to get their bodies. Fallujah is suffering too much, it is almost gone now."

Refugees had moved to another kind of misery now, he said. "It's a disaster living here at this camp," Khalil said. "We are living like dogs and the kids do not have enough clothes."

Spokesman for the Iraqi Red Crescent in Baghdad, Abdel Hamid Salim, told IPS that none of their relief teams had been allowed into Fallujah, and that the military had said it would be at least two more weeks before any refugees would be allowed back into the city.

"There is still heavy fighting in Fallujah," said Mr. Salim. "And the Americans won't let us in so we can help people."

In many camps around Fallujah and throughout Baghdad, refugees are living without enough food, clothing and shelter. Relief groups estimate there are at least 15,000 refugee families in temporary shelters outside Fallujah.

You gotta love it when someone does something that dumb in

The report said it was a 'strike slip' fault which does not usually cause large tsunamis.

Might be a corollary, but I've seen it in print before.  I think the first time I saw it it had to do with the probability of a poster stepping on his crank in a spelling flame being directly proportional to the snarkiness of the flame.

Greetings Tony!

An excellent post on what is probably very well going on in Iraq.  If one does not learn from history, one is doomed to failure. Prior to the war I saw some of the "music videos" that Saddam produced with him riding a white stallion, sword in hand, leading the charge against Jerusalem. This generation of Americans has no stomach for warand the same for the Vietnam era generation. Technology has it's own inherent flaws; in that it often fails to see and remember the bright sucessful simple ventures of the past.

As I said; this is an excellent post on past and current history, but some will undoubtedly, and probably quite rightly view this as off topic posting. With that said; is there a proper place to post such things? I don't mean ignorant political pot shots missing the real target, but sites that rightly apply history to real time events.
Merry Christmas to you, Tony, and to all the SWL's out there. Thank you for letting us use this forum for this. Tony, I hope you will respond to my question via email so that I can find an appropriate newsgroup with this quality of topics. Sincerely, Jon.

I don't like to step into these political post-But... don't talk about winning and loosing in VN. there really was no-win, no-loose in nam.  it was a meat grinder, just like Iraq is now. more money, more young kids. same-same. lost a lot of good people then and now. and, don't tell me this ones different, i see history repeating itself. it's too easy for someone, who has never been in combat, to send in more bodies. back then it was the cold war, now it's just business. still comma's out the same.
out of character for me, but- God bless our men in Iraq. may they all return alive.  i must be getting old...

I have $20 maximum and want a cheap radio. From what I've read so far my choices are between Jwin, Coby and B+H. Which is best? I know none of those are 'serious' sets but I have to start somewhere. TV audio would be nice, and battery life is a consideration too. I live in the boonies of WV, and will be happy if I get a good BBC signal. Thanks for the help.

That was the point Dr.  Try to have a sence of humor. Besides, we have to give you something to do Dr., Your bored to death. How many groups do you subscribe to in an effort to keep yourself amused? You have got to be one of the most prolific posters on Usenet. I bet you have several novels worth of posts. What a waste! I can come up with at least two K calls other than KDKA, they are KFNS, Wood River, Illinois and KQV also in Pittsburgh, there may be a couple more, but they are indeed
rare these days.

You can listen to stuff on those but I would recommend staying away from sw sets with TV coverage. In my experience, every radio I've ever used with TV reception was terrible. Those little am/sw sets like you stated above should be fine. There's guys in here that know more about those little radios than I do and they can tell you which one's best but stay away from those TV reception types. Just my 2c

You ought to think about plugging it into a small UPS then, as surge protection normally clamps at 330v and provide no power conditioning (voltage regulation) whatsoever.

I tend to agree with the thrift store approach for this one, it may take a few weeks of searching but when out and about stop in to local Goodwill and Salvation Army - you'll get a great radio and help others at the same time. I recently scored a Zenith Trans-Oceanic Royal 3000-1 for $19. Schwweeet! While your at it, rummage for some thrown away TV's, depending on thier construction many have flyback transformers, newer ones have switching power supply transformers that have #24 wire that can be unwound and make a great inexpensive starter antenna. I got 65' of #24 from a TV transformer once.

go to ebay for a used radio. you can get an older multi-band radio for that price. get an older analog type radio with the linear dial. you can get a higher quality radio with better performance than a new $20 digitally tuned radio will have. then while you are listening and learning about shortwave you can save for a $100 digital radio. by the time you have saved you will know enough to really appreciate the digital difference. great deals are out there for a patient buyer. i have several $100- plus radios that i bought NEW for less than $50. in a years time radioshack will close-out an expensive radio for half price or less. in the end you can have more radio for less money while still enjoying your larger and nicer (even if older) analog set the whole time!

I had a '-100 and a '-7. Both nice radios. The '100 suffered from chugging and other synthesizer noise, but behaved well, otherwise. It was underrated, and the need for a keypad was overstated -- it had a number of aids to allow you to get to any arbitrary place on the spectrum in a hurry without direct frequency entry.

The '7 was built like a tank.  Just a different generation of design and construction standards.  A fun radio to operate, but in these days of 1 Hz resolution probably not considered "practical."  I would have killed for one back in its day, though.

Hi,

Happy holidays.

The reason I'm after ILG's is that it meshes very nicely with Mark Fine's (no longer supported) Radio Listeners Database (RLDB).

Have no idea how to format these others and have RLDB read them.

Any ideas on how to ?

Regards,
Bob

Wing it, just like we always did.

You do not need a computer to listen to, or log, radio stations.

I didn't even have a computer, yet I logged and yes, even QSL'd over 200 shortwave countries.

Hi,

Question on ACARS:

Curious about how Acars is actually utilized, and for what purposes.

Is this used only for company communications air to ground, and ground to air communications, such as in-flight maintenance problems, arrival times, etc., or does the flight also use it to contact the FAA for clearances, etc. ?

Thanks,
Bob

I'm having a ball listening to BBC's "Pick of the Year" program, featuring some of the top stories and reports from 2004.   I listened in the bathroom while I was shaving and I listened in the kitchen, and now I'm listening in the computer room.  I'm listening on my new Grundig Mini 300PE my son gave me for Christmas.  What a great little portable! It makes SWLing more fun.

Who needs that old NRD-525!  No room for it in the bathroom!

Merry Christmas to all,

Greg

Inferior, and inexpensive junk, will do nothing but frustrate you. Save-up a few bucks, and get something decent. Thrift stores might yield a buried treasure. Just exercise a little patience, maybe utilize an old coffee can for a "piggy-bank". Darren

Farmer Christmas struggled down my chimney with a large package and out popped an Icom IC-756 PRO III which is now working side by side with my Drake R8B.
The performance of the new Icom is extremely good = very tight filters, amazing spectrum frequency scope, very good audio.
Generally seems able to clarify that very faint audio of weak DX somewhat better than the Drake.
But the Drake's not going to the scrap heap just yet, it's still an awesome radio.

A very HAPPY CHRISTMAS to you too Burr in the great Republic and to all of you out there = have a great family day.
It's been a sweltering 35C/95F here at the Southern tip of Africa with the summer thunder storms kicking up a huge static on the radio's.
and I'm struggling to digest all the Brazilian turkey I ate...

dxAce:  that's an excellent point.  I too have thousands of logs that I identified without a computer.

All you really need to do is spend 5 or 10 minutes listening to the station to identify it.  And if you have a copy of Passport to World Band Radio or the WRTH, you can ID the station much more quickly.

JD,

Rope through the Pully.

Rope tied onto the Weight.

tie-off the extra Rope at the Center Point of this movement with just enough slack allow  the Weight to Rise-and-Fall with the Movement of the Antenna Wire.

Having the extra Rope Tied-Off in this manner acts as a back-up to the Weight.

I'm new to this newsgroup, and have quickly learned how to make use of filters to remove the "political" posts. After all, if I'm going to read an opinion article it's not going to be a cut-n-paste job in this group. I believe that you are excluding a part of the picture, that is, unless you believe the barrage of anti-war posts are meant to edify & persuade. Regarding your proposed boycott, I have no commercial dealings here. I think, perhaps, that you intended to say censure. That said, I have indeed evaluated "his behavior" and I am inclined to leave DxAce out of my filters. I find his posts helpful.

Cordially,
M.

The problem is, the article didn't state that.

now, if it had stated that air traffic controllers had used radar to plot aircraft positions and asked pilots for a direction on the sited beam, that would have made some sense.

as I stated elsewhere, that fact wasn't presented in the article (thus making it sound as though radar can track a laser directly).

Serial starting with a "4"....is not this one of the "older" SW-8's that start coverage on 500KHz (not 100KHz).....it may not have Selectable Sideband Sync, just "Sync" on AM.

The seller is referencing website info pertaining to the "later" model that is much different from his "early" version.....not the same radio.

Am I correct here?

I doubt seriously that I'll make it till midnight.  Just got home from a great Bellamy Brothers concert on post, and am pretty tired out. Sooooo....

HAPPY 2005!  May it be a damn sight better than 2004, and may it bring comfort to those in need.

Take care, all, and stay well.
